Hope For Coal Settlement Mounts

Inquiry Board Says Progress Made At Parley

Will Report Today; Both Sides Willing To Extend Contract

WASHINGTON, June 23—(AP)—Hope for swift and peaceful settlement of terms for a new coal mining contract mounted tonight with a double-barreled announcement by a presidential inquiry board.

The board said:

1. John L. Lewis and the coal operators reported "considerable progress toward a complete settlement."

2. Both sides had agreed that if they saw it would be impossible to reach a complete contract they would seek to agree on extending the present contract.

That would provide time for additional negotiations and prevent the danger of a nationwide summer coal strike.

Report Deadline Extended

Less than an hour after its cheering announcement of progress, the inquiry board got a 24-hour extension of its deadline for reporting to President Truman on the dispute. The report now is due at 4 p. m. (EST) tomorrow, two hours after a scheduled meeting of Lewis with his UMW policy committee.

The present union-management agreement expires June 30.

There was no official word whether the coal operators had agreed to accept a federal court's approval of Lewis' $100 monthly pension plans. But the UMW chief previously had insisted that the operators accept the pension plan before he would talk contract terms.

The miners are due to begin their annual vacation next Saturday. It continues to July 6, so any possible strike could not begin until then.

Confidence took hold when Lewis this morning asked for a recess in his negotiations with the operators "to study matters to put before the Policy Committee tomorrow."

Operator Van Horn Loses

Then the board allowed several more hours (until 4 p. m. EST) for Lewis and the operators to report the progress of their talks.

Lewis and United Mine Workers' Secretary-Treasurer John Owens met privately with a subcommittee of coal operators during the recess in negotiations.

Lewis' chief request up to now had been to release pension payments and other distress benefits from the $45,000,000 welfare fund which has been built up in the past year from 10 cents a ton collections.

This has been blocked by Operator Ezra Van Horn, one of the three trustees of the fund. But he lost yesterday in Federal Court, opening the way for release of the money, unless an appeal is filed.

Van Horn sought unsuccessfully to block a plan for $100 a month pensions which Lewis and Sen. Bridges (R-NH), the other two trustees, had drawn up.

Van Horn's complaint was dismissed by Judge T. Alan Goldsborough.

Rail Stalemate Holds; Court Decision Awaited

WASHINGTON, June 23. (AP)—The White House today made a new effort to settle the railroad dispute. But it reported "no progress" on the eve of a federal court decision on whether to make the present no-strike injunction permanent.

Spokesmen for the operators were called to the office of John R. Steelman, presidential assistant, this afternoon. Leaders of three brotherhoods involved in the case arrived later.

Federal District Judge T. Alan Goldsborough has announced he will rule tomorrow on whether to make his present temporary restraining order against a strike a permanent injunction.

Russia Halts West Berlin Rail Traffic; Moscow Bloc Holds Meeting In Warsaw

Creation Of Separate State In Soviet Zone Reported Considered

WARSAW, June 23 (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Moltov flew to Warsaw today for a hush-hush conference with representatives of seven Eastern European satellites. Authoritative reports said they are considering creation of a separate East German state.

(The Moscow radio, heard in London, said the conference would discuss the decisions of the recent six-nation London conference which drafted a plan for eventual self-government for the three western ocupation zones of Germony. The participating nations were the United States, Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.)

Molotov gave the only official hint of what he and the foreign ministers of Hungary, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Romania, Bulgaria, Albania and Poland will discuss.

East German State Seen

When he arrived at Okecie airport from Moscow, he spoke of the necessity for security against "new German imperialist aggression." He spoke of the brotherhood between the Slavic nations.

Molotov's brief remarks were generally construed as indicating the conferees will devote their major talks to German problems.

There were many reports tonight that out of the parley may evolve an announcement that Russia favors setting up an East German state as an answer to the Western Allies proposed federalized Western Germany.

An official announcement disclosed these top-ranking officials are joining Molotov in the talks:

France, Italy Not Mentioned

The announcement, omitting any reference to possible attendance by Communist leaders of France and Italy, appeared to rule out that the Cominform would be a major item of discussion here. (The Cominform is the international Communist information bureau organized in Poland last September.)

German Communist leaders from the Soviet zone of Germany also were reported called here. An unconfirmed report said Marshal Vassily D. Sokolovsky, Russian military

Electric Power Also Shut Off As Currency Wall Rises In Berlin

BERLIN, Thursday, June 24 (AP)—The Russians halted all railway traffic into the western sectors of Berlin early today. They also shut off that part of the western sector's electric power generated in the Soviet sector.

Western circles viewed these two moves as Soviet retaliation for the refusal of the United States, Britain and France to accept the Soviet zone mark as Berlin's only legal currency.

The Russian-licensed German news agency said, however, the Soviets halted all freight and passenger traffic between Berlin and the western zone railhead at Helmstedt because of a "technical disturbance." It did not explain the nature of the disturbance.

British sources said the Soviets notified the Berlin electricity works that electric power used in the western sectors in the future will have to be produced in the West. Normally, power stations in the western sectors produce only one-half of the electricity used in those sectors.

All freight for Berlin's western sectors moves over the Helmstedt-Berlin line.

Late yesterday, Herman Rau, chairman of the Soviet zone's German Economic Commission, told newsmen that "unless supplies come by air, serious economic difficulties will develop for the western sectors" of Berlin.

Reds Threaten Sanctions

Earlier the Russians officially threatened economic sanctions against Western Berlin if the United States, France and Britain refused to accept the Soviet zone mark as Berlin's only legal currency.

The three Western Powers, however, voided yesterday a Russian decree making a new Soviet-stamped mark the only legal tender in Berlin and ordered issuance of the new Western German deutsche mark in their three sectors. The effect was to erect a paper currency wall through the heart of Berlin, 100 miles behind the iron curtain.

Thus Berlin's 3,400,000 people were caught in the middle of an East-West money fight.

Seven Bodies Are Recovered After Okla. Flash Flood

Streams Leave Banks After Heavy Rainfall

HYDRO, Okla., June 23 (AP)—At least seven persons are known dead in a flash flood that struck this West Central Oklahoma town during the night.

Deer Creek flooded United States Highway 66 after an unofficial 18 inches of rain fell.

A state highway patrolman reported three more persons missing. Hundreds of acres are under water in scattered areas throughout Oklahoma.

Rampaging streams also are out of their banks in Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri after 24 hours of heavy rainfall.

Of seven bodies taken to funeral homes at Binger and Hinton, Okla., four were identified as:

Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Friesen, Corn, Okla.

Mrs. E. J. Rogalsky, Oklahoma City.

James Dunn, negro, Amarillo, Tex.

Three children of the Friesen and Rogalsky families also were taken to the funeral homes but no identification has been made.

Dunn was a passenger in a Greyhound bus, which with 100 cars, was marooned in a five-mile stretch on United States Highway 66 near here. The bus driver, J. W. Jones, Amarillo, said the other 43 bus passengers have been accounted for.

Deer Creek is a small stream which crosses the highway at four places in the five miles.

Water reached eaves of homes in the northwest and northeast corners of the city.

The sheriff said Kingfisher had 11 inches of rain in the past 12 hours and that it was still falling in the afternoon.

Maritime Strike Again Is Barred

NEW YORK, June 23 (AP) — A threatened nationwide maritime strike by seven unions was again barred at least temporarily today by federal courts in New York, Cleveland and San Francisco.

The full weight of the Taft-Hartley law was invoked in New York where an 80-day anti-strike injunction was issued by Federal Judge John W. Clancy. The 80-day period starts from June 14 when the judge issued a temporary restraining order.

In Cleveland and San Francisco, federal judges extended for another 10 days the temporary restraining orders issued June 14. Judge George B. Harris in San Francisco withheld ruling on four motions to dismiss the government's request for an 80-day injunction.

Judge Emerich B. Freed acted in Cleveland to block a walkout by the CIO National Maritime Union against Great Lakes shipping.

Judge Freed commented at one point that "I never believed there was any proposition of law clearly giving the right to strike and I would like to see such authority."

The New York court order affects the NMU, the American Radio Association and the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, all CIO.

NMU President Joseph Curran said after the injunction had been issued that the union "will not strike in the face of a federal injunction that maintains the status quo which includes the hiring hall."

Mid-August Draft Registration Seen

WASHINGTON, June 23 (AP) — Selective service officials said today it's a safe guess that draft registration will start about August 16.

Actual drafting of men 19 through 25 may begin early in October, officials estimated. By that time, registration of men 18 through 25 should be finished.

The draft bill itself has not been signed by President Truman. Passed by Congress Saturday, it has not reached the White House. He has 10 days to act after he gets it.

Induction date hinges on when the bill is signed. The legislation provides that no men will be drafted until 90 days after the bill becomes law.

Meanwhile, the flood of enlistments of draft age men in the National Guard is pushing the enrollment of the guard well beyond its quota fixed a few days ago.

Enlistment in the guard or in organized reserves of the Navy, Army or Air Force before the bill becomes law exempts a man from the draft.

New Railroad Retirement Act Signed By Truman

WASHINGTON, June 23 — (AP)—President Truman signed into law today a measure raising retirement benefits under the Railroad Retirement Act by 20 per cent.

The new act cuts the railroads' contribution to the unemployment insurance fund, the reduction to be effective as long as the fund stays above $450,000,000. The cut is from the present three per cent to one-half of one per cent. On April 30 the fund stood at $928,274,000.

"Miss America" To Wed

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 23—(AP)—A marriage license was issued yesterday to "Miss America," 22-year-old Barbara Jo Walker, and Dr. John Vernon Hummel, 24. They plan to be married Saturday night in a lavish church ceremony before 2,000 invited guests.

"INVASION"-- Scores of Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg supporters yesterday invaded headquarters of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, of New York. Carrying a huge poster of the Michigan Senator and standards carrying the name of the Michigan Republican, they paraded around the room several times and then left for other demonstrations in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Republican convention headquarters.

Delegates Shout Their Ratification Of GOP Platform

International Peace Approach Is Pledged

PHILADELPHIA, June 23—(AP)—The Republican national convention today shouted unanimous ratification of a 1948 GOP platform pledging the party to an internationalist approach to world peace, a potent military force, a battle on Communism at home and civil rights for all.

On this platform Republicans hope to move into the White House for the first time in 16 years.

Not one voice among the 1,094 delegates was raised against the 2,000-word document—now left for the judgment of the American voter who will pick a President in November.

Resolutions Chairman Henry Cabot Lodge said it is the shortest platform in Republican history — "but it says a mouthful."

Applause greeted reading of the foreign plank and the civil rights section.

The platform calls for anti-lynch and anti-poll tax legislation, and takes a stand against racial segregation in the Armed Forces. A similar proposal to Congress by President Truman has torn the Democratic Party apart.

On foreign affairs, the statement of principles shuns isolationism. It declares for:

1. The strengthening of a United Nations backed by a world police force.

2. Elimination of the big power United Nations veto in cases dealing with peaceful settlement of disputes.

3. Aid to peace-loving nations for "collective security against aggression."

4. Economic aid to the new nation of Israel.

Mrs. Vandenberg Hopes Husband Not Nominated

PHILADELPHIA, June 23—(AP)—Breezy, friendly Hazel Vandenberg said today she doesn't want her husband, Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg to be nominated.

"That is not in any sense an aspersion on the job," she explained at a news conference. "It's too much responsibility. He's carried so much for years, it's terrible to add to the burden when he is so interested in foreign affairs. That's his baby."

Navy Planes Collide Over Detroit; Four Houses Set Afire By Flaming Debris

Two Pilots Killed; Residents Escape

DETROIT, June 23 (AP) — Two Navy planes, flying in a seven-ship formation, crashed and burned today after colliding over the heavily-populated east side area of Detroit.

The flaming wreckage set fire to four houses and a tool shop, but scores of residents fled to safety.

The two pilots of the single-seater planes died in the crash, and one tool shop employe was slightly injured when struck by flaming debris.

First reports of the accident said three planes were involved, but public relations officers at the Grosse Ile Naval Air Station said only two craft figured in the crash.

Lt. Comdr. David A. Black, public relations officer, said that when the two planes collided, the others scattered hurriedly. This led some ground spectators to believe three planes had crashed, he said.

Fire Sweeps One-Block Area

Wreckage of the falling planes spread a disastrous blaze through a one-block area including the four houses and the tool shop.

Fire and rescue crews made a preliminary search of the burning structures and expressed belief all occupants had escaped.

Live wires were felled by the falling wreckage and added to the fire menace as scores of police were mobilized to keep large crowds of spectators away from danger zones.

Police said the fire damage in the tool shop would run into many thousands of dollars.

Police reports indicated the wreckage that plunged into the tool shop was a Corsair-type, while the wreckage of the second plane — a Hellcat — struck a house and set it afire.

The flaming gasoline showered over three adjacent houses setting them afire as their occupants rushed to safety. Three of the homes were nearly destroyed, but the fourth was only slightly damaged.

Baseball Fans See Crash

The planes had passed over Briggs Stadium only a minute or two before the crash and some of the spectators at the Detroit-Washington game saw the mid-air collision.

Officers at the Grosse Ile station said the pilots involved were naval

Taft Supporters' Elephant Walks Into Court Suit

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.(AP)—Little Eva, the elephant that has been parading this convention city with supporters of Sen. Robert A. Taft, lumbered right into a court suit today.

A former employe of Dailey Brothers Circus got a court attachment against her to support a year-old damage claim. Deputy sheriffs promptly trekked forth on an elephant hunt.

Little Eva, the attachment suit said, is owned by Dailey Brothers Circus. She was flown here as the central figure of the Taft-for-President whoopla focussing on the Republican convention.

The suit was filed on behalf of Joseph Wallace, who claims he underwent amputation of an arm as the result of an injury at Dailey Brothers Circus in Bellefonte, Pa., last year.

Ministers Resign In Israeli Crisis

TEL AVIV, June 23 (INS)—Two Israeli ministers resigned tonight in a cabinet split provoked by the civil conflict between regular Israeli army forces and the dissident Irgun Zvai Leumi group.

They are Rabbi Judah Leib Fishman, minister for Jerusalem and religious affairs, and Moshe Shapiro, immigration minister.

The two apparently opposed the government's use of Haganah troops to crush a gun-running attempt yesterday by the Irgunists, in violation of United Nations truce terms.

Foreign Minister Moshe Shertok admitted earlier that the infant state faced an internal crisis because of the armed dispute which gutted the Irgunist gun-running ship Altalena at the Tel Aviv dock.

Shertok said "the capacity of the provisional government to uphold its international obligations was put to the test and the challenge was met unflinchingly."

Scattered skirmishes were reported early today after eight Jews were killed and 17 wounded in the Haganah repulse of the Irgunist landing attempt.

U.S. Considers Associating With European Union

WASHINGTON, June 23. (AP)—Undersecretary of State Lovett disclosed officially today that the State Department is hard at work on the problem of associating the United States with the Western European Union.

He told a news conference it is reasonable to expect direct diplomatic contact with the so-called Brussels pact countries fairly soon.

No date for talks or other action has been set, he said.

Military support is the basic problem. Lovett did not touch upon this directly. Involved in this is the question of providing it in some form yet undetermined for the Western European nations which banded together in self protection.

Dewey's Name Is First Placed In Nomination

Showdown Today; Indiana Backs N. Y. Governor; Pa. Split

CONVENTION HALL, PHILADELPHIA, June 23. (AP)—Ted Gamble, convention manager for Harold E. Stassen, said tonight Stassen has made no deals to quit the presidential race.

Gamble told a reporter there is "no truth" in reports that Stassen might withdraw from the GOP contest in favor of Sen. Arthur Vandenberg, of Michigan.

CONVENTION HALL, Philadelphia, June 23. (AP)—The GOP confidently and nosily pitched into its main business of picking a presidential candidate tonight and—amid boos and cheers—the name of Thomas E. Dewey led all the rest.

The New York Governor's name was placed in nomination first, and then in order followed:

Sen. Robert A. Taft, of Ohio; Gov. Earl Warren, of California, former Gov. Harold E. Stassen, of Minnesota; Sen. Raymond Baldwin, of Connecticut; Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan; Gen. Douglas MacArthur, of Wisconsin.

Gov. Dewey was the leader in votes, too. But he had no chance to prove it until tomorrow's actual balloting.

And a coalition of anxious rivals was trying desperately to slap a road block in his path. And they were saying they would do it, even as Sen. Edward Martin, of Pennsylvania, offered Dewey to the convention as "the next President of the United States."

It was Martin who started a big Dewey boom yesterday by giving up as a favorite son and joining forces with the New Yorker.

"This," Martin began, "is the greatest honor of my life—."

"Boo-o-o-! Boo-o-o!"

It bellowed up from delegates themselves and from the distant reaches of double balconies almost hidden behind a blaze of lights and tobacco haze.

Dewey Cheering Section Opens Up

Dewey followers were late getting the cheering section going. Then they put it into volume production.

But at the start, Martin was thundering against 'boo, boo, boo" with every phrase. He looked as if the boos hurt like solid punches.

Speaker Joseph W. Martin, the convention chairman, stepped up with a gavel and a glint in his eye.

"The chair," he said, as he often does in the House of Representatives, "cautions those in the galleries who are our guests to conduct themselves in the proper way."

"All the qualities," Martin intoned, ". . . name and fame . . . for social progress, prosperity and human freedom . . . foreign policy that makes sense . . great administrator . . . breath-taking record."

And when he finished a great chorus of cheers and applause exploded in the convention chamber. Delegates grabbed up state standards and waiting Dewey banners and cascaded into the aisles in one of those merry, mad parades which are the custom of these big political get togethers.

While the demonstration was on, Gov. Robert F. Bradford, of Massachusetts, threw in his lot with

Super-Bigamist Says He Wed 55 American Women

WASHINGTON, June 23—(INS)—A Washington woman's suit to annul her marriage today brought to light the philandering career of a 44-year-old man who claims to have married 55 trusting American women.

The super-bigamist, a corn belt Casanova from Schermerville, Ill., is Louis Larvier, five-foot six-inch, 130-pound inmate of Leavenworth Penitentiary. He was sentenced to a term of eight years last January for violating the National Stolen Property Act.

Details of his many marriages were disclosed by the FBI when Mrs. Frances Cecilia Roche Lamarr, Washington, brought suit to annul their marriage under the name of Lamarr on October 8, 1947. Mrs. Lamarr referred reporters to the FBI, saying the FBI men knew all about her husband.

The FBI men knew. They had traced Larvier's activities back and forth across the continent, and had found that under a page-long string of aliases he had married or nearly married women in most of the major cities of the United States.

In all, the FBI located 17 of the 55 wives he claimed.

His tactics, the FBI men said, in all cases were nearly the same. Short, swarthy and bespectacled he always introduced himself as a wealthy, retired mining man from Alaska or some other distant place, and then conducted a whirlwind courtship.

Once married, Larvier soon brought up the subject of investment—in Alaska, or perhaps in South Africa. When he had obtained his latest wife's money and valuables, he quickly disappeared.

Bishop Denounces Beauty Contests; Girl Withdraws

WHEELING, W. Va., June 23 — Bishop John J. Swint, of the Wheeling Roman Catholic Diocese, today called modern beauty contests "totally pagan" and "absolutely immoral." He said he would excommunicate any Catholic girl of his diocese who took part in one.

The Bishop made the statement in confirming a report that he had told a Catholic girl to withdraw from a beauty contest in Wheeling or be expelled from the church.

Miss Gertrude Bedway, Wheeling, had asked that her name be withdrawn from the list of entrants in a Wheeling contest set for next Monday night. She said she did so because of the Bishop's stand on the matter.

Asked if he would confirm the girl's statement, the Bishop replied that "I have taken a definite stand against it."

Protesting against what he called the "indecent exposure" of girls' bodies before the public and in print in connection with beauty contests, Bishop Swint declared:

"How any girl can submit herself to that ordeal is beyond me."

"If nakedness were eliminated" from beauty contests, he continued, "the whole thing would fall to pieces."

Seven girls were entered in the contest. No others have announced their withdrawal.

The contest is a preliminary to a state beauty pageant to be held at Moundsville. The winner there will be entered in the annual "Miss America" contest at Atlantic City.

Seven Bodies Are Recovered After Okla. Flash Flood

Streams Leave Banks After Heavy Rainfall

HYDRO, Okla., June 23 (AP)—At least seven persons are known dead in a flash flood that struck this West Central Oklahoma town during the night.

Deer Creek flooded United States Highway 66 after an unofficial 18 inches of rain fell.

A state highway patrolman reported three more persons missing. Hundreds of acres are under water in scattered areas throughout Oklahoma.

Rampaging streams also are out of their banks in Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri after 24 hours of heavy rainfall.

Of seven bodies taken to funeral homes at Binger and Hinton, Okla., four were identified as:

Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Friesen, Corn, Okla.

Mrs. E. J. Rogalsky, Oklahoma City.

James Dunn, negro, Amarillo, Tex.

Three children of the Friesen and Rogalsky families also were taken to the funeral homes but no identification has been made.

Dunn was a passenger in a Greyhound bus, which with 100 cars, was marooned in a five-mile stretch on United States Highway 66 near here. The bus driver, J. W. Jones, Amarillo, said the other 43 bus passengers have been accounted for.

Deer Creek is a small stream which crosses the highway at four places in the five miles.

Water reached eaves of homes in the northwest and northeast corners of the city.

The sheriff said Kingfisher had 11 inches of rain in the past 12 hours and that it was still falling in the afternoon.

Maritime Strike Again Is Barred

NEW YORK, June 23 (AP) — A threatened nationwide maritime strike by seven unions was again barred at least temporarily today by federal courts in New York, Cleveland and San Francisco.

The full weight of the Taft-Hartley law was invoked in New York where an 80-day anti-strike injunction was issued by Federal Judge John W. Clancy. The 80-day period starts from June 14 when the judge issued a temporary restraining order.

In Cleveland and San Francisco, federal judges extended for another 10 days the temporary restraining orders issued June 14. Judge George B. Harris in San Francisco withheld ruling on four motions to dismiss the government's request for an 80-day injunction.

Judge Emerich B. Freed acted in Cleveland to block a walkout by the CIO National Maritime Union against Great Lakes shipping.

Judge Freed commented at one point that "I never believed there was any proposition of law clearly giving the right to strike and I would like to see such authority."

The New York court order affects the NMU, the American Radio Association and the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, all CIO.

NMU President Joseph Curran said after the injunction had been issued that the union "will not strike in the face of a federal injunction that maintains the status quo which includes the hiring hall."

Mid-August Draft Registration Seen

WASHINGTON, June 23 (AP) — Selective service officials said today it's a safe guess that draft registration will start about August 16.

Actual drafting of men 19 through 25 may begin early in October, officials estimated. By that time, registration of men 18 through 25 should be finished.

The draft bill itself has not been signed by President Truman. Passed by Congress Saturday, it has not reached the White House. He has 10 days to act after he gets it.

Induction date hinges on when the bill is signed. The legislation provides that no men will be drafted until 90 days after the bill becomes law.

Meanwhile, the flood of enlistments of draft age men in the National Guard is pushing the enrollment of the guard well beyond its quota fixed a few days ago.

Enlistment in the guard or in organized reserves of the Navy, Army or Air Force before the bill becomes law exempts a man from the draft.

New Railroad Retirement Act Signed By Truman

WASHINGTON, June 23—(AP)—President Truman signed into law today a measure raising retirement benefits under the Railroad Retirement Act by 20 per cent.

The new act cuts the railroads' contribution to the unemployment insurance fund, the reduction to be effective as long as the fund stays above $450,000,000. The cut is from the present three per cent to one-half of one per cent. On April 30 the fund stood at $928,274,000.

"Miss America" To Wed

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 23—(AP)—A marriage license was issued yesterday to "Miss America," 22-year-old Barbara Jo Walker, and Dr. John Vernon Hummel, 24. They plan to be married Saturday night in a lavish church ceremony before 2,000 invited guests.

Super-Bigamist Says He Wed 55 American Women

WASHINGTON, June 23—(INS)—A Washington woman's suit to annul her marriage today brought to light the philandering career of a 44-year-old man who claims to have married 55 trusting American women.

The super-bigamist, a corn belt Casanova from Schermerville, Ill., is Louis Larvier, five-foot six-inch, 130-pound inmate of Leavenworth Penitentiary. He was sentenced to a term of eight years last January for violating the National Stolen Property Act.

Details of his many marriages were disclosed by the FBI when Mrs. Frances Cecilia Roche Lamarr, Washington, brought suit to annul their marriage under the name of Lamarr on October 8, 1947. Mrs. Lamarr referred reporters to the FBI, saying the FBI men knew all about her husband.

The FBI men knew. They had traced Larvier's activities back and forth across the continent, and had found that under a page-long string of aliases he had married or nearly married women in most of the major cities of the United States.

In all, the FBI located 17 of the 55 wives he claimed.

His tactics, the FBI men said, in all cases were nearly the same. Short, swarthy and bespectacled he always introduced himself as a wealthy, retired mining man from Alaska or some other distant place, and then conducted a whirlwind courtship.

Once married, Larvier soon brought up the subject of investment—in Alaska, or perhaps in South Africa. When he had obtained his latest wife's money and valuables, he quickly disappeared.

"INVASION"—Scores of Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg supporters yesterday invaded headquarters of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, of New York. Carrying a huge poster of the Michigan Senator and standards carrying the name of the Michigan Republican, they paraded around the room several times and then left for other demonstrations in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Republican convention headquarters.

Delegates Shout Their Ratification Of GOP Platform

International Peace Approach Is Pledged

PHILADELPHIA, June 23—(AP)—The Republican national convention today shouted unanimous ratification of a 1948 GOP platform pledging the party to an internationalist approach to world peace, a potent military force, a battle on Communism at home and civil rights for all.

On this platform Republicans hope to move into the White House for the first time in 16 years.

Not one voice among the 1,094 delegates was raised against the 2,000-word document—now left for the judgment of the American voter who will pick a President in November.

Resolutions Chairman Henry Cabot Lodge said it is the shortest platform in Republican history — "but it says a mouthful."

Applause greeted reading of the foreign plank and the civil rights section.

The platform calls for anti-lynch and anti-poll tax legislation, and takes a stand against racial segregation in the Armed Forces. A similar proposal to Congress by President Truman has torn the Democratic Party apart.

On foreign affairs, the statement of principles shuns isolationism. It declares for:

1. The strengthening of a United Nations backed by a world police force.

2. Elimination of the big power United Nations veto in cases dealing with peaceful settlement of disputes.

3. Aid to peace-loving nations for "collective security against aggression."

4. Economic aid to the new nation of Israel.

Mrs. Vandenberg Hopes Husband Not Nominated

PHILADELPHIA, June 23—(AP)—Breezy, friendly Hazel Vandenberg said today she doesn't want her husband, Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg to be nominated.

"That is not in any sense an aspersion on the job," she explained at a news conference. "It's too much responsibility. He's carried so much for years, it's terrible to add to the burden when he is so interested in foreign affairs. That's his baby."

Navy Planes Collide Over Detroit; Four Houses Set Afire By Flaming Debris

Two Pilots Killed; Residents Escape

DETROIT, June 23 (AP) — Two Navy planes, flying in a seven-ship formation, crashed and burned today after colliding over the heavily-populated east side area of Detroit.

The flaming wreckage set fire to four houses and a tool shop, but scores of residents fled to safety.

The two pilots of the single-seater planes died in the crash, and one tool shop employe was slightly injured when struck by flaming debris.

First reports of the accident said three planes were involved, but public relations officers at the Grosse Ile Naval Air Station said only two craft figured in the crash.

Lt. Comdr. David A. Black, public relations officer, said that when the two planes collided, the others scattered hurriedly. This led some ground spectators to believe three planes had crashed, he said.

Fire Sweeps One-Block Area

Wreckage of the falling planes spread a disastrous blaze through a one-block area including the four houses and the tool shop.

Fire and rescue crews made a preliminary search of the burning structures and expressed belief all occupants had escaped.

Live wires were felled by the falling wreckage and added to the fire menace as scores of police were mobilized to keep large crowds of spectators away from danger zones.

Police said the fire damage in the tool shop would run into many thousands of dollars.

Police reports indicated the wreckage that plunged into the tool shop was a Corsair-type, while the wreckage of the second plane — a Hellcat — struck a house and set it afire.

The flaming gasoline showered over three adjacent houses setting them afire as their occupants rushed to safety. Three of the homes were nearly destroyed, but the fourth was only slightly damaged.

Baseball Fans See Crash

The planes had passed over Briggs Stadium only a minute or two before the crash and some of the spectators at the Detroit-Washington game saw the mid-air collision.

Officers at the Grosse Ile station said the pilots involved were naval

Taft Supporters' Elephant Walks Into Court Suit

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.(AP)—Little Eva, the elephant that has been parading this convention city with supporters of Sen. Robert A. Taft, lumbered right into a court suit today.

A former employe of Dailey Brothers Circus got a court attachment against her to support a year-old damage claim. Deputy sheriffs promptly trekked forth on an elephant hunt.

Little Eva, the attachment suit said, is owned by Dailey Brothers Circus. She was flown here as the central figure of the Taft-for-President whoopla focussing on the Republican convention.

The suit was filed on behalf of Joseph Wallace, who claims he underwent amputation of an arm as the result of an injury at Dailey Brothers Circus in Bellefonte, Pa., last year.

Ministers Resign In Israeli Crisis

TEL AVIV, June 23 (INS)—Two Israeli ministers resigned tonight in a cabinet split provoked by the civil conflict between regular Israeli army forces and the dissident Irgun Zvai Leumi group.

They are Rabbi Judah Leib Fishman, minister for Jerusalem and religious affairs, and Moshe Shapiro, immigration minister.

The two apparently opposed the government's use of Haganah troops to crush a gun-running attempt yesterday by the Irgunists, in violation of United Nations truce terms.

Foreign Minister Moshe Shertok admitted earlier that the infant state faced an internal crisis because of the armed dispute which gutted the Irgunist gun-running ship Altalena at the Tel Aviv dock.

Shertok said "the capacity of the provisional government to uphold its international obligations was put to the test and the challenge was met unflinchingly."

Scattered skirmishes were reported early today after eight Jews were killed and 17 wounded in the Haganah repulse of the Irgunist landing attempt.

U.S. Considers Associating With European Union

WASHINGTON, June 23. (AP)—Undersecretary of State Lovett disclosed officially today that the State Department is hard at work on the problem of associating the United States with the Western European Union.

He told a news conference it is reasonable to expect direct diplomatic contact with the so-called Brussels pact countries fairly soon.

No date for talks or other action has been set, he said.

Military support is the basic problem. Lovett did not touch upon this directly. Involved in this is the question of providing it in some form yet undetermined for the Western European nations which banded together in self protection.

Dewey's Name Is First Placed In Nomination

Showdown Today; Indiana Backs N. Y. Governor; Pa. Split

CONVENTION HALL, PHILADELPHIA, June 23. (AP)—Ted Gamble, convention manager for Harold E. Stassen, said tonight Stassen has made no deals to quit the presidential race.

Gamble told a reporter there is "no truth" in reports that Stassen might withdraw from the GOP contest in favor of Sen. Arthur Vandenberg, of Michigan.

CONVENTION HALL, Philadelphia, June 23. (AP)—The GOP confidently and nosily pitched into its main business of picking a presidential candidate tonight and—amid boos and cheers—the name of Thomas E. Dewey led all the rest.

The New York Governor's name was placed in nomination first, and then in order followed:

Sen. Robert A. Taft, of Ohio; Gov. Earl Warren, of California, former Gov. Harold E. Stassen, of Minnesota; Sen. Raymond Baldwin, of Connecticut; Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan; Gen. Douglas MacArthur, of Wisconsin.

Gov. Dewey was the leader in votes, too. But he had no chance to prove it until tomorrow's actual balloting.

And a coalition of anxious rivals was trying desperately to slap a road block in his path. And they were saying they would do it, even as Sen. Edward Martin, of Pennsylvania, offered Dewey to the convention as "the next President of the United States."

It was Martin who started a big Dewey boom yesterday by giving up as a favorite son and joining forces with the New Yorker.

"This," Martin began, "is the greatest honor of my life—."

"Boo-o-o-! Boo-o-o!"

It bellowed up from delegates themselves and from the distant reaches of double balconies almost hidden behind a blaze of lights and tobacco haze.

Dewey Cheering Section Opens Up

Dewey followers were late getting the cheering section going. Then they put it into volume production.

But at the start, Martin was thundering against 'boo, boo, boo" with every phrase. He looked as if the boos hurt like solid punches.

Speaker Joseph W. Martin, the convention chairman, stepped up with a gavel and a glint in his eye.

"The chair," he said, as he often does in the House of Representatives, "cautions those in the galleries who are our guests to conduct themselves in the proper way."

"All the qualities," Martin intoned, ". . . name and fame . . . for social progress, prosperity and human freedom . . . foreign policy that makes sense . . great administrator . . . breath-taking record."

And when he finished a great chorus of cheers and applause exploded in the convention chamber. Delegates grabbed up state standards and waiting Dewey banners and cascaded into the aisles in one of those merry, mad parades which are the custom of these big political get togethers.

While the demonstration was on, Gov. Robert F. Bradford, of Massachusetts, threw in his lot with

Bishop Denounces Beauty Contests; Girl Withdraws

WHEELING, W. Va., June 23 — Bishop John J. Swint, of the Wheeling Roman Catholic Diocese, today called modern beauty contests "totally pagan" and "absolutely immoral." He said he would excommunicate any Catholic girl of his diocese who took part in one.

The Bishop made the statement in confirming a report that he had told a Catholic girl to withdraw from a beauty contest in Wheeling or be expelled from the church.

Miss Gertrude Bedway, Wheeling, had asked that her name be withdrawn from the list of entrants in a Wheeling contest set for next Monday night. She said she did so because of the Bishop's stand on the matter.

Asked if he would confirm the girl's statement, the Bishop replied that "I have taken a definite stand against it."

Protesting against what he called the "indecent exposure" of girls' bodies before the public and in print in connection with beauty contests, Bishop Swint declared:

"How any girl can submit herself to that ordeal is beyond me."

"If nakedness were eliminated" from beauty contests, he continued, "the whole thing would fall to pieces."

Seven girls were entered in the contest. No others have announced their withdrawal.

The contest is a preliminary to a state beauty pageant to be held at Moundsville. The winner there will be entered in the annual "Miss America" contest at Atlantic City.

Winchester Blast Claims One Life

WINCHESTER, Va., June 23 (AP)—One person died tonight of burns received in a department store explosion which injured 18 others and tore up a large section of the three-story building.

The victim was Lawrence Owens, 23, assistant manager of Rayliss Department Store, who was in the basement of the store at the time the blast shattered the building.

Employes of the store and early morning shoppers were among those injured.

Owens died in a Winchester hospital, where 10 others hurt in the explosion were held for treatment. Among the hospitalized was Chris Spanos, a stock clerk, who was with Owens in the basement at the time of the blast.

Police Chief J. Thomas Boyd said tonight that he was unable to interview Spanos on the probable cause of the explosion because of his serious condition.

The blast, a grim followup to the gas explosion which took 13 lives in a Harrisonburg beauty shop last year, tore through the first floor from the basement and left the brick sidewalls buckled and on the verge of collapse.

Show window manikins were flung sprawling in disarray in a litter of glass and stone on the streets, presenting a gruesome scene to passers-by.

Rescuers said the force of the explosion blew off all of Spanos' clothing. The stock clerk was naked when he was rescued from the debris.

There is yet no official announcement that the conference will propose the creation of a separate East German state as an answer to moves by the Western Allies. But informed sources said such a move is likely and undoubtedly already has been discussed.

"Counterfeit" War Hero Is Placed On Probation

CHICAGO, June 23 (AP)—A year's probation was granted today to a former Pentagon building civilian clerk who falsified military records to give himself an impressive war record.

Federal Judge William J. Campbell, who passed sentence, told Andrew Keller, Jr., 21, Peotone, Ill., his case was not a "big" crime.

"Your record shows you did a good job and served your country well in Washington," the judge commented.

Keller gave himself a second lieutenancy in the Army Reserve Corps by taking an Army serial number from an unused block and filling out a detailed record of fictitious exploits.

Dewey's Name

Dewey. But the delegation he heads is ready to split after it tosses two complimentary ballots to Sen. Leverett Saltonstall.

Bricker Nominates Taft

It was Sen. John W. Bricker who put Taft up for the presidency.

No boos for him, only an outpouring of applause.

Bricker soon threw away his text and let the mob of delegates and onlookers have it ad lib.

"Great Republican today . . ." Bricker roared, "great President tomorrow . . . great leader . . . great faith . . . in the name of millions of Republicans . . . unparalleled boldness . . . best President we could name for these United States."

Then the organized riot on the convention floor all over again. Whether or not they favored Taft, delegates got into the parade and blew off steam.

Stassen was put forward for the nomination as a statesman with "vision and forthrightness."

Rep. Walter H. Judd, of Minnesota, said in a nomination speech prepared for the GOP national convention:

"America must have a president of vision and forthrightness, integrity and courage; statesmanship and stature; one who can act before trouble starts instead of struggling painfully to straighten out a mess after it has happened; a President of physical and mental vigor, seasoned by wide experience in many fields."

Showdown Draws Near

Here in Convention Hall, it looked like a long night of oratory and drama, and of sweating it out through nominating and seconding speeches and through more demonstrations like the 32-minute show for Dewey.

Tonight the show, tomorrow the showdown. And Dewey backers were aiming at victory by the third ballot.

It takes 548 of the convention's 1,094 votes to name the winner.

The stop-Dewey team was counting on holding the line against the New York Governor for the first two tallies. Then if they succeeded, they were figuring on getting a recess to reorganize their campaign and try to pick a single candidate for whom they all could go to bat.

Dewey's power drive for the nomination smashed ahead as the strategic Indiana delegation put its full 29 votes behind the New York Governor.

But the Pennsylvania delegation angrily split wide open and Gov. James H. Duff carried 27 votes to Sen. Taft. Dewey snagged 41 of the Pennsylvania votes. Stassen and Vandenberg got one apiece.

Duff's swing to Taft was a blow to Vandenberg's supporters. Duff had long been leaning toward the Michigan Senator.

Battle Of Claims

Early tonight, the battle of claims and counter-claims, punches and counter-punches was going likethis.

Dewey had made important advances with the help of Missouri and New Jersey.

Taft and a coalition of other rivals frantically tried to head him off. The Ohio Senator even said:

"The Dewey blitz is stopped."

Dewey countered by grabbing off Indiana.

Duff and Lodge put whatever influence they have behind Taft and Vandenberg.

What it all added up to was that Dewey was running hard out front, trying for a quick nomination. Supporters said he is in, maybe on the first ballot, but more likely on the second or third.

Once Dewey is stopped — if he can be — the anti-Dewey men will get together to try to put up a candidate all can support, from among their own number or perhaps a compromise "outsider."

The talk is that Taft might be given a test run on the second ballot and Vandenberg or Stassen one on the third. Yet the frantic scramble of this worried team still had produced conferences and words rather than the action and votes needed to block the New York Governor.

reservists on two weeks' tour of duty, but withheld names of the victims pending notification of next of kin.

Officials said the Corsair plane was nearly cut in two by the collision which occurred at about 1,100 feet. The engine of the plane landed nearly a block from where the tail assembly fell.

Authorities could offer no immediate explanation of the cause of the mishap. Several eyewitnesses told police that one plane gave out a trail of smoke just before the collision.

Actress Asks Divorce

LOS ANGELES, June 22—(AP)—Actress Barbara Lawrence filed suit for divorce today from Actor John Fontaine, alleging cruelty. They had been married a year.

Russia---Electric

Whether today's announcement meant the Russians had made their first economic sanction move was not immediately clear.

The Russians' chief transport official said "necessary directives" had been issued to restore the Berlin-Helmstedt line as quickly as possible. He added it was impossible to reroute traffic without having "unfavorable effects" on the entire rail network in the Soviet Zone.

Council Chamber Invaded

The tension from this latest development in the cold war exploded late yesterday when hundreds of political demonstrators swarmed into the City Hall in the Russian sector. The 2,000 or 3,000 demonstrators invaded the council chamber and for 90 minutes prevented a special council debate on the currency situation. The American-controlled radio said the shouting crowd was made up of followers of the Soviet-sponsored Socialist Unity Party.

Later last night the council adopted a resolution declaring both East and West currency should be valid in the city. Social Democrats, Liberal Democrats and Christian Democrats supported the resolution. The Socialist Unity Party opposed it.

As the councilmen left the hall, German reporters said, a crowd shouted threats and assaulted three of the councilmen, including a woman.

Charging that the Russians were attempting to "usurp" life and death economic power over the 2,000,000 Germans in the western sector, the three powers made the new deutsche marks legal tender in their sectors immediately.

"Chronic Reliefer"

People living in the vicinity of the house where Mrs. Peyton lived and died, describe her as "a chronic reliefer" who did little or no work.

Neighbors claim she appeared to be ill much of the time and at other times took short trips, and appeared quite well. Several of them say they had taken prescriptions to the drug store for her and returned with the pills or insulin, sometimes both.

Mrs. Peyton rented the six room house and sub-let the upstairs to Mrs. Van Meter. Mrs. Peyton, according to Mrs. Van Meter, accumulated "all kinds of things," and piled and stored them in the front room of the house. She had her bed in the middle or dining room, because there wasn't room for it in the front part, Mrs. Van Meter said.

Mrs. Peyton refused to permit anyone to clean up the place, except on occasions when she did allow Mrs. Van Meter to scrub around the bed and table, "but never under the bed," because of suit cases and boxes stored there.

Neighbors declare Mrs. Peyton was on several occasions extremely rude to Mrs. Mary Margaret Zimmerman, the Welfare Board case worker who made regular visits there. Mrs. Zimmerman was praised by several neighbors for her patience with Mrs. Peyton and her efforts to get her to clean up the place or permit someone else to help her.

Mrs. Westerfeld said last night they had suspected Mrs. Peyton of hoarding various things she could not use and did not need, but no one would acknowledge the fact, and the woman never permitted a Welfare Board representative to spend any amount of time in the place or enter the front part where the hoard was later found.

Had Many Visitors

Mrs. Peyton, neighbors declare, had many visitors. People often came to her place late at night, some said. Many of these visitors were described as strangers in the area.

It was also learned that she had a fear complex. She told Mrs. Van Meter on several occasions that, "some one is after me." She also told Mrs. Van Meter, who lived in the house with her more than a year, that the place was "haunted." This was supposed to account for noises heard at night.

Throughout the neighborhood, Mrs. Peyton is described as "eccentric" and "the kind of person who always claimed she was poor and had nothing, yet hoarded everything she could get."

At one time she had a group of friends from Hagerstown and another from South Cumberland who came to her home and held religious services and said prayers for "her recovery." These groups finally stopped coming, however, when Mrs. Feyton told them "you aren't helping me," and refused to let them in the house.

Residents in the neighborhood realized Mrs. Peyton was on relief, and many of them on occasions tried to help her. For one reason or another they lost interest in her and she would drift to another group or individual for friendship.

Crime News Curb Opposition Grows

SALISBURY, Md., June 23 (AP)—The Salisbury Times said today it will support the Maryland Press Association in opposition to new court rules which would restrict the publication of crime news.

Officials and members of the association are to meet at Silver Hill, Md., tomorrow night to plan their campaign against the proposed regulations.

Oscar L. Morris, managing editor of the Times, wired the Prince Georges County Press Association:

"Please record our endorsement of your stand against proposed 'Rule 9' which would deprive the press of Maryland of access to the legal and authoritative sources of news in criminal cases.

"We believe that the operating of the police and of the courts should remain open to public scrutiny either by an individual or through the press and any attempt to prohibit full publication should be vigorously opposed by the newspapers of Maryland."

The presidents of the Pince George's and Montgomery County Press Associations called the conference at Silver Hill.

Glenn T. James, publisher of the Centreville, Md., Record Observer and president of the state association, said he and other members would attend.

The rule which they oppose is similar to one which has been in force in Baltimore for several years. The Court of Appeals has proposed giving it state-wide effect.

Winchester Blast Claims One Life

WINCHESTER, Va., June 23 (AP)—One person died tonight of burns received in a department store explosion which injured 18 others and tore up a large section of the three-story building.

The victim was Lawrence Owens, 23, assistant manager of Rayliss Department Store, who was in the basement of the store at the time the blast shattered the building.

Employes of the store and early morning shoppers were among those injured.

Owens died in a Winchester hospital, where 10 others hurt in the explosion were held for treatment. Among the hospitalized was Chris Spanos, a stock clerk, who was with Owens in the basement at the time of the blast.

Police Chief J. Thomas Boyd said tonight that he was unable to interview Spanos on the probable cause of the explosion because of his serious condition.

The blast, a grim followup to the gas explosion which took 13 lives in a Harrisonburg beauty shop last year, tore through the first floor from the basement and left the brick sidewalls buckled and on the verge of collapse.

Show window manikins were flung sprawling in disarray in a litter of glass and stone on the streets, presenting a gruesome scene to passers-by.

governor of Eastern Germany, had come to Warsaw.

There is yet no official announcement that the conference will propose the creation of a separate East German state as an answer to moves by the Western Allies. But informed sources said such a move is likely and undoubtedly already has been discussed.

"Counterfeit" War Hero Is Placed On Probation

CHICAGO, June 23 (AP)—A year's probation was granted today to a former Pentagon building civilian clerk who falsified military records to give himself an impressive war record.

Federal Judge William J. Campbell, who passed sentence, told Andrew Keller, Jr., 21, Peotone, Ill., his case was not a "big" crime.

"Your record shows you did a good job and served your country well in Washington," the judge commented.

Keller gave himself a second lieutenancy in the Army Reserve Corps by taking an Army serial number from an unused block and filling out a detailed record of fictitious exploits.

Dewey's Name

Dewey. But the delegation he heads is ready to split after it tosses two complimentary ballots to Sen. Leverett Saltonstall.

Bricker Nominates Taft

It was Sen. John W. Bricker who put Taft up for the presidency.

No boos for him, only an outpouring of applause.

Bricker soon threw away his text and let the mob of delegates and onlookers have it ad lib.

"Great Republican today . . ." Bricker roared, "great President tomorrow . . . great leader . . . great faith . . . in the name of millions of Republicans . . . unparalleled boldness . . . best President we could name for these United States."

Then the organized riot on the convention floor all over again. Whether or not they favored Taft, delegates got into the parade and blew off steam.

Stassen was put forward for the nomination as a statesman with "vision and forthrightness."

Rep. Walter H. Judd, of Minnesota, said in a nomination speech prepared for the GOP national convention:

"America must have a president of vision and forthrightness, integrity and courage; statesmanship and stature; one who can act before trouble starts instead of struggling painfully to straighten out a mess after it has happened; a President of physical and mental vigor, seasoned by wide experience in many fields."

Showdown Draws Near

Here in Convention Hall, it looked like a long night of oratory and drama, and of sweating it out through nominating and seconding speeches and through more demonstrations like the 32-minute show for Dewey.

Tonight the show, tomorrow the showdown. And Dewey backers were aiming at victory by the third ballot.

It takes 548 of the convention's 1,094 votes to name the winner.

The stop-Dewey team was counting on holding the line against the New York Governor for the first two tallies. Then if they succeeded, they were figuring on getting a recess to reorganize their campaign and try to pick a single candidate for whom they all could go to bat.

Dewey's power drive for the nomination smashed ahead as the strategic Indiana delegation put its full 29 votes behind the New York Governor.

But the Pennsylvania delegation angrily split wide open and Gov. James H. Duff carried 27 votes to Sen. Taft. Dewey snagged 41 of the Pennsylvania votes. Stassen and Vandenberg got one apiece.

Duff's swing to Taft was a blow to Vandenberg's supporters. Duff had long been leaning toward the Michigan Senator.

Battle Of Claims

Early tonight, the battle of claims and counter-claims, punches and counter-punches was going likethis.

Dewey had made important advances with the help of Missouri and New Jersey.

Taft and a coalition of other rivals frantically tried to head him off. The Ohio Senator even said:

"The Dewey blitz is stopped."

Dewey countered by grabbing off Indiana.

Duff and Lodge put whatever influence they have behind Taft and Vandenberg.

What it all added up to was that Dewey was running hard out front, trying for a quick nomination. Supporters said he is in, maybe on the first ballot, but more likely on the second or third.

Once Dewey is stopped — if he can be — the anti-Dewey men will get together to try to put up a candidate all can support, from among their own number or perhaps a compromise "outsider."

The talk is that Taft might be given a test run on the second ballot and Vandenberg or Stassen one on the third. Yet the frantic scramble of this worried team still had produced conferences and words rather than the action and votes needed to block the New York Governor.

reservists on two weeks' tour of duty, but withheld names of the victims pending notification of next of kin.

Officials said the Corsair plane was nearly cut in two by the collision which occurred at about 1,100 feet. The engine of the plane landed nearly a block from where the tail assembly fell.

Authorities could offer no immediate explanation of the cause of the mishap. Several eyewitnesses told police that one plane gave out a trail of smoke just before the collision.

Actress Asks Divorce

Russia---Electric

Whether today's announcement meant the Russians had made their first economic sanction move was not immediately clear.

The Russians' chief transport official said "necessary directives" had been issued to restore the Berlin-Helmstedt line as quickly as possible. He added it was impossible to reroute traffic without having "unfavorable effects" on the entire rail network in the Soviet Zone.

Council Chamber Invaded

The tension from this latest development in the cold war exploded late yesterday when hundreds of political demonstrators swarmed into the City Hall in the Russian sector. The 2,000 or 3,000 demonstrators invaded the council chamber and for 90 minutes prevented a special council debate on the currency situation. The American-controlled radio said the shouting crowd was made up of followers of the Soviet-sponsored Socialist Unity Party.

Later last night the council adopted a resolution declaring both East and West currency should be valid in the city. Social Democrats, Liberal Democrats and Christian Democrats supported the resolution. The Socialist Unity Party opposed it.

As the councilmen left the hall, German reporters said, a crowd shouted threats and assaulted three of the councilmen, including a woman.

Charging that the Russians were attempting to "usurp" life and death economic power over the 2,000,000 Germans in the western sector, the three powers made the new deutsche marks legal tender in their sectors immediately.

Doctors' and druggists' bills are sent to the Health Department, which in turn submits them to the State Department of Health for payment.

"Chronic Reliefer"

People living in the vicinity of the house where Mrs. Peyton lived and died, describe her as "a chronic reliefer" who did little or no work.

Neighbors claim she appeared to be ill much of the time and at other times took short trips, and appeared quite well. Several of them say they had taken prescriptions to the drug store for her and returned with the pills or insulin, sometimes both.

Mrs. Peyton rented the six room house and sub-let the upstairs to Mrs. Van Meter. Mrs. Peyton, according to Mrs. Van Meter, accumulated "all kinds of things," and piled and stored them in the front room of the house. She had her bed in the middle or dining room, because there wasn't room for it in the front part, Mrs. Van Meter said.

Mrs. Peyton refused to permit anyone to clean up the place, except on occasions when she did allow Mrs. Van Meter to scrub around the bed and table, "but never under the bed," because of suit cases and boxes stored there.

Neighbors declare Mrs. Peyton was on several occasions extremely rude to Mrs. Mary Margaret Zimmerman, the Welfare Board case worker who made regular visits there. Mrs. Zimmerman was praised by several neighbors for her patience with Mrs. Peyton and her efforts to get her to clean up the place or permit someone else to help her.

Mrs. Westerfeld said last night they had suspected Mrs. Peyton of hoarding various things she could not use and did not need, but no one would acknowledge the fact, and the woman never permitted a Welfare Board representative to spend any amount of time in the place or enter the front part where the hoard was later found.

Had Many Visitors

Mrs. Peyton, neighbors declare, had many visitors. People often came to her place late at night, some said. Many of these visitors were described as strangers in the area.

It was also learned that she had a fear complex. She told Mrs. Van Meter on several occasions that, "some one is after me." She also told Mrs. Van Meter, who lived in the house with her more than a year, that the place was "haunted." This was supposed to account for noises heard at night.

Throughout the neighborhood, Mrs. Peyton is described as "eccentric" and "the kind of person who always claimed she was poor and had nothing, yet hoarded everything she could get."

At one time she had a group of friends from Hagerstown and another from South Cumberland who came to her home and held religious services and said prayers for "her recovery." These groups finally stopped coming, however, when Mrs. Peyton told them "you aren't helping me," and refused to let them in the house.

Residents in the neighborhood realized Mrs. Peyton was on relief, and many of them on occasions tried to help her. For one reason or another they lost interest in her and she would drift to another group or individual for friendship.

Crime News Curb Opposition Grows

SALISBURY, Md., June 23 (AP)—The Salisbury Times said today it will support the Maryland Press Association in opposition to new court rules which would restrict the publication of crime news.

Officials and members of the association are to meet at Silver Hill, Md., tomorrow night to plan their campaign against the proposed regulations.

Oscar L. Morris, managing editor of the Times, wired the Prince Georges County Press Association:

"Please record our endorsement of your stand against proposed 'Rule 9' which would deprive the press of Maryland of access to the legal and authoritative sources of news in criminal cases.

"We believe that the operating of the police and of the courts should remain open to public scrutiny either by an individual or through the press and any attempt to prohibit full publication should be vigorously opposed by the newspapers of Maryland."

The presidents of the Pince George's and Montgomery County Press Associations called the conference at Silver Hill.

Glenn T. James, publisher of the Centreville, Md., Record Observer and president of the state association, said he and other members would attend.

The rule which they oppose is similar to one which has been in force in Baltimore for several years. The Court of Appeals has proposed giving it state-wide effect.

Achievements of 80th Congress Constructive

Thanks to a gruelling day-and-night schedule, which cleaned up practically all of the crowded agenda, the Eightieth Congress has adjourned. It is not a final adjournment, however. If important matters arise, Congress will be subject to recall by House and Senate leaders or by the President.

There is always a last-minute rush before adjournment of Congress, especially when the national conventions lie just ahead. The flurry was worse this year for two reasons; President Truman chose to stage a political feud with Congress, and a majority of Representatives in the House kicked over the traces on foreign aid and the draft.

For sheer, dogged irresponsibility, the Truman action is almost without parallel in American history. At the close of a crowded session, the President's place is in Washington. His job is not only to sign or veto bills but to use his influence to put through constructive legislation. Instead, Mr. Truman chose to flash about the country on a barnstorming tour, assailing the Eightieth Congress as "the worst since the Thad Stevens Congress"—Thad Stevens, by the way, put through a historic civil rights program on behalf of the Southern Negro—while his subordinates in Washington prepared veto messages.

The resulting feud was the worst of the kind this country has seen since Andrew Johnson's day. Even Senator Vandenberg, who has done more for Administration foreign policy than any Democrat could—and who received no credit whatever in the Truman diatribes—was forced to denounce this campaign to "subordinate the national welfare to partisan sniping."

The House action on the draft did nothing to remedy matters. As expected, it invited a filibuster by Henry Wallace's partner, Senator Taylor. But the Republican leaders were equal to the emergency. While Taylor continued his marathon harangue, Senate and House spokesmen conferred informally and prepared a compromise draft bill that will meet the manpower needs of our expanded armed service. The two houses also agreed to restore the foreign aid program.

Despite the excitement of the past weekend, the Eightieth Congress remains, for its achievements in the national and international fields, one of the most constructive in the Nation's history. Indeed, history may record that it has been one of the best.

Proposal For Destruction Of Weeds A Welcome One

Weeds, on the whole, are the ugliest of all plant life. If permitted to thrive through the growing months they become a menace to health and property alike. They provide hiding places for mosquitos during the day, breeding places for insects and other garden devastators while creating a harboring place for reptiles and objects which could bring harm to children and adult.

Weeds will increase from year to year unless they are cut down or uprooted before they have time to form seeds. Finance Commissioner Buckholtz had this in mind, no doubt, when he called attention of the City Council to the fact that there is a prevalence of weeds and high grass in several residential sections, and requested that steps be taken to eliminate them.

Of course, it should never be necessary for city authorities to direct property owners to keep weeds under control. They ought to act in self-defense against the menace they invite by permitting weeds to grow undisturbed.

The worst offenders, it is believed, are the owners of vacant lots in residential areas. This is especially true in cases where those owners live away from the unimproved plots of ground. For then it is a matter of out of sight, out of mind. The majority of those landowners would hasten to clear their premises of unsightly weeds should attention be called to the condition, and that should be a part of the weed-elimination campaign.

The task need not be difficult for chemicals are now available in various forms which not only kill weed plants but destroy the roots in the same operation. These weed-destruction formulas may be either sprayed or dusted on the weeds.

The city, by the way, should not overlook its own shortcomings. There are, for instance, healthy growths of weeds in little-used alleys, bordering on residential properties, and on other city-owned spots. Commissioner Buckholtz should see to it that the city sets an example in this proposed crusade.

The Unenforceable

In his baccalaureate address at Princeton, President Dodds expressed to the graduating class a thought that has been expressed at many other universities and colleges throughout the United States. It is not a spectacular concept, but there is evidence that it is taking hold, in and outside of the collegiate sphere

In their reflection of it, the colleges are giving words to an undercurrent of feeling which has its inspiration both in religious concepts and in a growing awareness of the inner meaning of the American dream.

Said Dr. Dodds at Princeton:

"You can run through the whole conceivable catalogue of things which America should do to be strong, and if you are discerning and thorough in your analysis, you will conclude that the fundamental basis of our security is moral; it exists in our allegiance to a code of ethics beyond the power of any government to enforce, because it begins and ends with the hearts of men.

"It is self-imposed and self-enforced by a sense of the inherent dignity and worth of a man as an individual and as a child of God. Lord Moulton has termed 'obedience to the unenforceable . . . the obedience of a man to that which he cannot be enforced to obey, for he must enforce this law upon himself. The future of liberty depends upon obedience to this unenforceable code.'"

In our national opposition to communism the fundamental basis of our security, as Dr. Dodds said, is moral. Legislation alone cannot make us secure. We shall be secure if we cherish and give evidence of our allegiance to a form of government the supreme strength of which lies not in statute, but in the hearts of men.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases.

"The First" Requires Courage

The medical pioneers who were responsible for most of our great medical discoveries deserve considerable respect and appreciation. Most of them did their work under trying conditions, without the aid of modern devices. But while all honor is due these great leaders, little if anything had been said about the individuals who were willing to submit to the original experiments. The names of Doctors Long, Wells, Jackson, and Morton will always be remembered because of their work in anesthesia but what about the first patients?

One of the most heroic stories along this line occurred in Kentucky, early in the last century. Jane Crawford lived with her husband and children in a frontier settlement in the hills of that state. Her abdomen had become tremendously enlarged. Pregnancy was suspected but as time went by, this possibility was ruled out. Her condition baffled the doctors in her community and finally Ephraim McDowell, a surgeon from Danville, was called into consultation. His diagnosis was a large ovarian tumor, an abnormality that was considered hopeless. While explaining the situation to Mrs. Crawford, McDowell mentioned the fact that surgery was theoretically possible. The operation had been tried elsewhere but had never proved successful; nevertheless, it was their only chance and if she were willing, he would do the best he could.

After careful consideration, she announced that she was ready because of her confidence in his judgment and skill. His only request was that the operation be performed in his office, which was 60 miles away. A few days before Christmas, Jane bid her family goodby and started on horseback upon this great adventure, the tumor cradled on the pommel of the saddle. Her family remained behind. At that moment she undoubtedly felt that she might never see them again.

It is hard to imagine how she survived the trip itself and Mosby believes that this ride deserves as much recognition as that of Paul Revere, Sheridan, or the charge of the light brigade. After all, such men were stimulated by war and patriotism; Jane Crawford was inspired by courage, faith, and the will to live.

On December 24, 1809, the operation was performed on a table in McDowell's office. There is no truth in the story that a mob gathered outside waiting to hang the surgeon if his patient died. In those days anesthetics, antiseptics, and trained nurses were unknown to the operating room. With a knife and an artery forceps as his only equipment, he removed the 22½ pound tumor. Five days later, Mrs. Crawford was up and about, and even made her own bed.

Visitors to Danville can still see the surgeon's home and the room in which the operation took place. A monument was erected in his honor as the first man to perform this operation satisfactorily. The patient returned to her cabin home, bore more children, and reached the ripe old age of 78.

Unallied

M. M. writes: If a person has arthritis of the finger joints, does this mean that she is more susceptible to hardening of the arteries?

Reply

There is no connection between the two. Older persons may develop certain types of arthritis along with graying hair, wrinkled skin, and hardening of the arteries. But these aging manifestations are unrelated and do not predispose to one another.

There Certainly Is

Mrs. D. O. writes: Is there such a thing as deterioration of the brain? Is it hereditary?

Reply

Yes, hereditary and otherwise. In the majority of cases, aging is a factor; in others, injury or infection.

Nose and Emotions

H. J. writes: Could chronic rhinitis result from a nervous shock?

Reply

Not rhinitis due to allergy or inflammation. On the other hand, nasal symptoms are often aggravated by emotional upsets.

Improves Posture

D. T. writes: Will stretching exercises to reduce the waistline make a person grow taller?

Reply

No, but they may make the individual stand taller.

"Born With" Defect

R. L. C. writes: Is there such a thing as congenital rupture?

Reply

Yes, most hernias are congenital because the condition constitutes a defect or weakness in the development of the underlying parts.

Headache Types

W. H. writes: How does migraine differ from ordinary headache?

Reply

Migraine is more severe, comes on at periodic intervals, is usually located over one side of the head, and in many instances there is a hereditary tendency.

They Can

F. T. writes: Can vegetarians develop arthritis?

Reply

Yes, because most forms of arthritis are not related to the diet.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Finagling By Vandenberg's Supporters; Senator Has Private Conference With Big-Shot Gamblers; Farley Turns Up At GOP Headquarters With Only A Grin

Says DREW PEARSON

PHILADELPHIA, June 23—The supporters of statesmanlike Senator Vandenberg should have known that hell hath no fury like a woman scorned. Their biggest mistake at the opening of the Convention was to kick out Mrs. Dudley Hay after her many years of hard work as National Committeewoman and as Secretary of the GOP National Committee.

For thereby hangs a tale of political finagling which goes straight to the doors of some of the biggest Republican leaders in Michigan—a tale which does not help the presidential future of Arthur Vandenberg.

Some time ago, two big-shot Michigan gamblers, Danny Sullivan and Lincoln Fitzgerald, were indicted and immediately became fugitives from justice. Skipping to Nevada, they established the Nevada Club in wide-open Reno and stayed there ,thumbing their noses at Michigan law.

Efforts to have them extradited on the part of Ed Jacobs, McComb County Prosecutor, failed.

Finally, Jacobs and Mrs. Dudley Hay, Secretary of the Republican National Committee, went to Washington, enlisted the support of Senator Malone of Nevada, and he in turn appealed to Senator Vail Pittman, of Nevada, who immediately moved to send Danny Sullivan and Lincoln Fitzgerald back to the arms of the law in Michigan.

From that moment on, says Mrs. Hay, her chances of re-election as Republican National Committeewoman from Michigan were nil. County Prosecutor Jacobs bears her out. The big GOP leaders of Michigan turned thumbs down.

Campaign Contributions

The Michigander who led the ouster of Mrs. Hay was Arthur Summerfield, Republican National Committeeman, also one of the vigorous urgers of Vandenberg for President.

Summerfield has been president of the Detroit Automobile Dealers Association, which, during the war, worked out a deal with the State whereby its books were not audited for payment of the sales taxes. The dealers were supposed to pay the tax without any audit.

Now it develops that some of them did not pay sales taxes and they have been indicted. Simultaneously Michigan Attorney General Eugene Black charges that though the auto dealers did not pay taxes to the State, they did pay GOP campaign contributions to Mr. Summerfield. They could afford one but not the other. In fact, Summerfield held one meeting of the auto dealers at which they agreed to an assessment of $1 for every car sold in 1947—this money to go into the GOP campaign chest for Vandenberg.

Attorney General Black, himself a Republican, strongly hints that this donation to the Republican Party was tied up with the deal whereby the auto dealers did not have their books audited for sales-tax payments. Black has also stated that he planned to bring Summerfield hilmself before a grand jury just as soon as the Republican Convention is over.

Behind the Scenes

Another backstage development inside the Michigan group was a private conference between Senator Vandenberg and Frank McKay, big-shot Republican leader of Michigan and head of the gambling fraternity. McKay, who comes from Grand Rapids, has always been a political backer of Vandenberg, in addition to being a powerful wirepuller in the liquor and race-track fraternity.

McKay was a defendant in a famous trial involving graft and corruption in the sale of liquor, along with a bunch of minor goons and gangsters, but got off after two hung juries. He has also been indicted on other counts but never convicted.

William McKeighen, former mayor of Flint and a close associate of McKay's, was also indicted along with the two gamblers, Sullivan and Fitzgerald. He also has been a fugitive from justice.

McKay traveled on the same train to Philadelphia with the Vandenberg forces and has been snug-as-a-bug-in-a-rug with them since.

Politicians recognize that a senator sometimes has to compromise with political leaders back home to be re-elected, but many also feel that with President Truman's weakest spot the Pendergast machine in Kansas City, the Republicans should be careful that their candidate, while a great statesman internationally, does not have clay feet.

GOP-Go-Round

Jim Farley created a hubbub by bobbing up at Republican headquarters. . . . "Aren't you a little early?" asked a reporter. Jim only grinned. . . . Most conspicuous convention absentee is Walter Brown of Ohio, former Postmaster General and GOP "Kingmaker." Brown has been a familiar figure at every Republican conclave since 1920 when he put Warren Harding across in the famous "smoke-filled" hotel room. Defeated for this convention in a delegate race, Brown remarked: "Guess I'll get caught up on my fishing." . . . While older delegates concentrate on hard bargaining in convention lobbies, younger ones swap war experiences and display snapshots of new babies. . . . Newsmen are betting that Chicago Tribune Publisher Bert McCormick picked up the check for that swank dinner Gov. Dwight Green threw for 750 delegates and Illinois political leaders. . . . Philadelphia police did a good preconvention job of rounding up pickpockets and loiterers for the protection of delegates. All suspicious characters with past records were brigged for 90 days. . . . When bustling, ubiquitous Senator Wayland "Curly" Brooks of Illinois was introduced to a GOP precinct committeeman, he confided: "It's tougher holding a job like yours than getting elected to the Senate. I was a precinct committeeman for eight years."

Convention Chaff

Eisenhower's ex-Mess Sergeant Marty Snyder invaded Philadelphia in a jeep to distribute "I'm for Ike" buttons among the Republicans. He thinks prospects will look up when the Democrats take over Philadelphia. . . . As the Convention wore on the giveaways mounted. . . . Governor Warren's supporters almost drowned eager visitors in California orange juice. . . . The Taft forces were first on the street with free neckties. . . . The Stassenites followed with free neckties, too, then came up with a huge 50 pound Wisconsin cheese carved up for all visitors. When the cheese gave out the Stassen adherents switched to free iced tea with California lemons (an effort to woo Warren's backing no doubt). . . . Supporters of Senator Vandenberg invaded the streets with red and gold ribbons inscribed, "The bell tolls two." . . . Half the Michigan delegation objected to the little-understood slogan. Actually it is a takeoff on Lloyds, famous insurance company, which tolls the bell twice when a ship completes a safe voyage.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Uncontrolled And Unled

PHILADELPHIA, June 23. — Democracy, in its truest sense, is direct participation of the people in the decisions of government. It is often, and correctly, suggested that the New England Town Meeting comes closest to a truly Democratic institution. Actually, the Republican Convention this year is an enlarged Town Meeting, with much of the same independence of action and speech that my neighbors in Sandisfield, Mass., express at their sessions.

No one bosses this convention. No Mark Hanna has made himself felt. No great leader has been produced either by the course of events or by outstanding speech. In the various candidates' headquarters, the conversation indicates that this is equally true within the States. The voting, for several ballots, will indicate that delegates are voting independently, and in the effort to influence votes, the drummers and solicitors are approaching not outstanding personalities, but individual delegates.

That is one reason why, on this morning, it is possible to say that no candidate can with any approach to assurance tell even his best friend that he knows he will be nominated.

That also is the reason, I am sure, why the opening sessions of the convention have produced relatively mild cheering and applause. There has been no demonstration for anybody. Clare Luce nearly created one when she interjected Vandenberg's name in a speech where it did not belong.

Clare was so beautiful—perhaps lovely is a more accurate description — that one readily can forgive what in another would have been regarded as a major impropriety; namely, to attempt to jump the gun in favor of a candidate prior to actual nomination. The applause was wild and Mrs. Luce sought to stimulate it by smiles and by upward gesticulations, but it died and cleverly she mentioned other candidates to cover the floperoo.

If anyone could have stimulated a demonstration, Clare Luce could have done it after the unnecessarily elongated speech by Governor Green, and the heat of the lights and the general annoyance with the ushers and pages who are overtrained and forget that the delegates own the convention and that the press and photographers are there to accommodate the Republican Party and not the other way around. Whoever trained that crew must have seen service in Kaiser Wilhelm's Germany Army. Not only is a sense of humor lacking but such a rigidity appears in mind and body as to create a general impression of uniformed nuisances. Certainly in their effort to prevent gate crashers, they act as though they were the masters, not temporary jobholders. Also, I want to see the day when a press photographer breaks his camera over the head of a stuffed shirt who exhibits a moment of authority by pushing men around. These temporary great men are like temporary gentlemen: they shrivel on exposure.

In that sort of atmosphere, relief in the form of a noisy, shouting, gesticulating demonstration is like a seventh-inning stretch at a ball game. But it did not happen. The Luce effort for Vandenberg aborted. That does not mean that he might not, in a pinch, be nominated. It does mean that no one is more popular than either Taft or Dewey. This convention will be pleased if eithed Taft or Dewey is nominated for the Presidency.

It seems not to have any particular taste for a compromise choice. That seems to be the gist of conversation as one moves among delegates. It will be a disappointed convention if the candidate is a resort to compromise. There is sentiment for Taft; there is sentiment for Dewey. That is among delegates.

There is no pronounced sentiment for Stassen or Vandenberg or anybody else for a compromise.

Talk today is that neither Taft nor Dewey has enough. Both sides claim victory; both believe that there is a trend to their candidate. Whatever truth there is in those statements may be disclosed before this article appears, but what is of permanent interest is that the delegates would prefer either Taft or Dewey and no one else. That is why sentiment is so evenly divided between these two and why the convention has become a horse race.

Dewey Better Than An Even Bet To Win The Nomination

By DAVID LAWRENCE

PHILADELPHIA, June 23 — The strength of Dewey is best attested by the desperate efforts on the part of managers for other candidates to stop him. On every side there is talk of a "Stop Dewey" strategy, but it merely indicates that the New York governor is the leading candidate. Despite the attempts at invasion of his ranks, no important defections have been reported.

The Taft managers and the strategists for some of the other candidates, particularly Stassen, have been trying to line up a combination to block Dewey, but all the estimates of their combined strength do not seem like an alliance that really can prevent Dewey's triumph. At present writing, it looks like Dewey will win not later than the fifth ballot, and possibly as early as the second or third.

Vandenberg Against Martin

Senator Vandenberg could easily have been the nominee of this convention but he has restrained his supporters while permitting the governor of Michigan to say that he is "available", the Senator has made no further move. The purpose of the "available" statement, it appears now, was to set up a threat against a possible nomination of Speaker Martin or Bricker or some candidate out of sympathy with the international program championed by Senator Vandenberg.

Michigan For Vandenberg

The Michigan delegation, on the other hand, has lost none of its enthusiasm for Senator Vandenberg and the members are working hard to line up delegates in the event that the Dewey strength does not reach a majority on the fourth or fifth ballot. It is agreed that Vandenberg would come along strongly if Dewey doesn't go over the top early. So apparently there is no inconsistency between efforts to get second choices for Vandenberg and the attitude of detachment assumed by the Senator himself.

Dewey however, is better than an even bet tonight.

MATTER OF FACT

By JOSEPH And STEWART ALSOP

The Basket Of Eels

PHILADELPHIA.

THE central figure of the opening phase of the Republican convention is the brisk, competent, ambitious Governor of New York, Thomas E. Dewey wants the Presidency so badly he can taste it. He is so close to getting the Republican nomination that he must already imagine he hears the deafening delicious roar of the ovation for the victor. He is pressing so hard that irreverent gossips say he has already promised a single, unhappily indivisible Collectorship of the Bureau of Internal Revenue to no less than three of the hungry faithful. And he would have the thing in the bag if a few people liked him just a little bit better.

The leaders whose dislike threatens Governor Dewey are Harold Stassen, Governor Earl Warren of California and Governor James Duff of Pennsylvania. If these three should combine with Governor Driscoll of New Jersey to start a boom for Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Dewey's chance of being nominated would be drastically reduced. Or if Harold Stassen should agree to support Senator Robert A. Taft in return for second place on the ticket, Taft would become a very real challenge to his New York rival.

A Taft-Stassen ticket has been a secret Taft objective for some time, although Taft was reading Stassen out of the Republican Party only a few weeks ago. In the squalid closing hours of the Congress, Taft's Philadelphia floor manager, Congressman George Bender, was talking a Taft-Stassen deal to every Stassenite in sight. Now the idea of the deal has been publicly endorsed by no less a titan than Colonel Robert R. McCormick, whose eagerness to get Taft into the Presidency seems to have overcome his detestation for Stassen. The story behind all this mystifying maneuvering casts a rather sharp, unlovely light, both on the character of this convention and on Governor Dewey's problem.

Dewey's problem, essentially, is to capture one of the big state delegations which, added to his present strength, should carry his bandwagon across the finish line. All things considered, Illinois has long been about his best bet. The Illinois favorite son is Governor Dwight Green, who is just the sort of politician who could be expected to make his way as Colonel McCormick's creature. Under McCormick's influence Illinois is committed to Taft. But there are already at least eight Dewey men in the group, and over forty of the Illinois delegates are state office-holders. If Green could be induced to break away from McCormick, the officeholders would follow. Taft would lose Illinois.

Accordingly, some time ago, it began to be known that Dewey was trying to tempt Governor Green, who longs to ascend to the empyrean of national politics. What must coarsely be called a deal seems to have been offered. Green was to defy the terrifying lightnings of the Colonel's wrath. He was to lead his office-holders into the Dewey camp at the right moment. And Dewey was to reward Green with the Vice Presidency, the Secretaryship of National Defense or some other plum.

Since Oregon, Harold Stassen has been almost more eager to defeat Dewey than to be nominated himself. He evidently got wind of the temptations being spread before the convention, and took the remarkable step of warning the Colonel that Dewey and Green were plotting behind his august back. At that time, the Colonel made no visible sign. Since then, reports have continuously circulated, both that Greene would yield to Dewey's temptations, and that Stassen would join with Taft. The Colonel's indorcement of a Taft-Stassen ticket suggests that Dewey is to be denied his hoped-for Illinois support (although of course Green is still perfectly capable of giving a good sharp bite to the hand that fed him, if he only dares). The question remains whether Stassen will accept McCormick's peculiar suggestion of making a deal with Taft.

On this point, two facts can be stated authoritatively. In the first place, Stassen himself has explained to several callers that his co-operation with Taft against Dewey, in such matters as the seating of the Georgia delegation, is aimed exclusively at Dewey. Stassen's purpose, he says, is to hurt Dewey greatly without helping Taft much. In the second place, a leading pro-Taft business man from Stassen's native Twin Cities went to Stassen last night and offered him the Vice-Presidency, cold turkey, if he would back Taft for first place. Without hesitation, Stassen turned the offer down flat. But will he change his mind now?

Stassen is intensely ambitious and has sometimes made grave concessions to expediency. He has never yet shown himself, however, to be as totally unprincipled as supporting Taft (whose views are the exact opposite of his own) would prove him. Although the vagaries of the human heart are difficult to predict, it is still an odds-on bet that Stassen will not get with Taft.

But if Dewey is not to be menaced by a Taft-Stassen deal, he has still to deal with the possible combination of Governors Warren, Duff, Driscoll and Stassen in favor of Vandenberg. The formation of such a combination will be of an immensely complex operation, involving the inter-action of all sorts of factors of vanity and ambition. The Vandenberg underground, which includes some very shrewd operators, is working on the project. If Illinois is really beyond Dewey's reach, the task of the Vandenberg underground will be rendered far easier. But the combination is not formed yet. Furthermore, if the underground looks like being able to put Vandengerg over, there is always the last-minute possibility that Dewey will benefit by switches of Taft strength. Such a political basket of eels is this convention, which is to settle the fate of the United States and the World.

Today's Talk

Ben Hur Lampman

Many years ago, while on a visiting tour of the West, I was told about a writer on the Portland Oregonian, by name Ben Hur Lampman. I went to see him and found him a most modest and delightful human being. His interest in nature and his talk about birds, animals, and in fact everything in general, fascinated me. When I left him he handed me a little book of poems and essays that he had just had published.

I read this little book on my way home and later sent for everything that he had ever had published, and began interesting others in his work.

The late Dr. John H. Finley once stated that he considered Ben Hur Lampman as one of the five best editorial writers in the country, and Edward A. Weeks, editor of the Atlantic Monthly, considers him "the best teller of the colloquial tale since Ring Lardner."

Different authorities have likened this writer to Thoreau, John Muir, and others—but he is unlike any of them, save in his spirit. He stands alone. There is no writer whom I know of, quite like him. You read one of his stories, or poems, and you want to read another. Then he gets into your blood. But, before you realize it, he somehow gets into your heart, and you love the man.

Ben Hur Lampman's latest book is called "The Wild Swan," a collection of stories that suggest pure genius. He's folksy, to suggest a word that fits so many of his stories. The dominating notes to all that he writes are simplicity and sincerity. He writes of the everyday in life, and whether of the old lady "at the end of the car line," of the dog Blinker, or of "Old Bill"—it's all the same. You read, drawn to the writer and to the character, or to the scene portrayed.

Many of the stories in this book will bring a smile, and many will find their place in your heart, but there is a high spirit in them all. Ben Hur Lampman knows his Oregon, but he knows the human heart better. And the flowers know him, the streams, and the forest. He is a part of them. This book of Ben Hur Lampman's is one that should lie close to where you go for your rest at night. Reading one of his forty-four sketches at that time—and many of them again and again—is sure to make you a happier human being the next morning!

Achievements of 80th Congress Constructive

Thanks to a gruelling day-and-night schedule, which cleaned up practically all of the crowded agenda, the Eightieth Congress has adjourned. It is not a final adjournment, however. If important matters arise, Congress will be subject to recall by House and Senate leaders or by the President.

There is always a last-minute rush before adjournment of Congress, especially when the national conventions lie just ahead. The flurry was worse this year for two reasons; President Truman chose to stage a political feud with Congress, and a majority of Representatives in the House kicked over the traces on foreign aid and the draft.

For sheer, dogged irresponsibility, the Truman action is almost without parallel in American history. At the close of a crowded session, the President's place is in Washington. His job is not only to sign or veto bills but to use his influence to put through constructive legislation. Instead, Mr. Truman chose to flash about the country on a barnstorming tour, assailing the Eightieth Congress as "the worst since the Thad Stevens Congress"—Thad Stevens, by the way, put through a historic civil rights program on behalf of the Southern Negro—while his subordinates in Washington prepared veto messages.

The resulting feud was the worst of the kind this country has seen since Andrew Johnson's day. Even Senator Vandenberg, who has done more for Administration foreign policy than any Democrat could—and who received no credit whatever in the Truman diatribes—was forced to denounce this campaign to "subordinate the national welfare to partisan sniping."

The House action on the draft did nothing to remedy matters. As expected, it invited a filibuster by Henry Wallace's partner, Senator Taylor. But the Republican leaders were equal to the emergency. While Taylor continued his marathon harangue, Senate and House spokesmen conferred informally and prepared a compromise draft bill that will meet the manpower needs of our expanded armed service. The two houses also agreed to restore the foreign aid program.

Despite the excitement of the past weekend, the Eightieth Congress remains, for its achievements in the national and international fields, one of the most constructive in the Nation's history. Indeed, history may record that it has been one of the best.

Proposal For Destruction Of Weeds A Welcome One

Weeds, on the whole, are the ugliest of all plant life. If permitted to thrive through the growing months they become a menace to health and property alike. They provide hiding places for mosquitos during the day, breeding places for insects and other garden devastators while creating a harboring place for reptiles and objects which could bring harm to children and adult.

Weeds will increase from year to year unless they are cut down or uprooted before they have time to form seeds. Finance Commissioner Buckholtz had this in mind, no doubt, when he called attention of the City Council to the fact that there is a prevalence of weeds and high grass in several residential sections, and requested that steps be taken to eliminate them.

Of course, it should never be necessary for city authorities to direct property owners to keep weeds under control. They ought to act in self-defense against the menace they invite by permitting weeds to grow undisturbed.

The worst offenders, it is believed, are the owners of vacant lots in residential areas. This is especially true in cases where those owners live away from the unimproved plots of ground. For then it is a matter of out of sight, out of mind. The majority of those landowners would hasten to clear their premises of unsightly weeds should attention be called to the condition, and that should be a part of the weed-elimination campaign.

The task need not be difficult for chemicals are now available in various forms which not only kill weed plants but destroy the roots in the same operation. These weed-destruction formulas may be either sprayed or dusted on the weeds.

The city, by the way, should not overlook its own shortcomings. There are, for instance, healthy growths of weeds in little-used alleys, bordering on residential properties, and on other city-owned spots. Commissioner Buckholtz should see to it that the city sets an example in this proposed crusade.

The Unenforceable

In his baccalaureate address at Princeton, President Dodds expressed to the graduating class a thought that has been expressed at many other universities and colleges throughout the United States. It is not a spectacular concept, but there is evidence that it is taking hold, in and outside of the collegiate sphere.

In their reflection of it, the colleges are giving words to an undercurrent of feeling which has its inspiration both in religious concepts and in a growing awareness of the inner meaning of the American dream.

Said Dr. Dodds at Princeton:

"You can run through the whole conceivable catalogue of things which America should do to be strong, and if you are discerning and thorough in your analysis, you will conclude that the fundamental basis of our security is moral; it exists in our allegiance to a code of ethics beyond the power of any government to enforce, because it begins and ends with the hearts of men.

"It is self-imposed and self-enforced by a sense of the inherent dignity and worth of a man as an individual and as a child of God. Lord Moulton has termed 'obedience to the unenforceable . . . the obedience of a man to that which he cannot be enforced to obey, for he must enforce this law upon himself. The future of liberty depends upon obedience to this unenforceable code.'"

In our national opposition to communism the fundamental basis of our security, as Dr. Dodds said, is moral. Legislation alone cannot make us secure. We shall be secure if we cherish and give evidence of our allegiance to a form of government the supreme strength of which lies not in statute, but in the hearts of men.

said about the individuals who were willing to submit to the original experiments. The names of Doctors Long, Wells, Jackson, and Morton will always be remembered because of their work in anesthesia but what about the first patients?

One of the most heroic stories along this line occurred in Kentucky, early in the last century. Jane Crawford lived with her husband and children in a frontier settlement in the hills of that state. Her abdomen had become tremendously enlarged. Pregnancy was suspected but as time went by, this possibility was ruled out. Her condition baffled the doctors in her community and finally Ephraim McDowell, a surgeon from Danville, was called into consultation. His diagnosis was a large ovarian tumor, an abnormality that was considered hopeless. While explaining the situation to Mrs. Crawford, McDowell mentioned the fact that surgery was theoretically possible. The operation had been tried elsewhere but had never proved successful; nevertheless, it was their only chance and if she were willing, he would do the best he could.

After careful consideration, she announced that she was ready because of her confidence in his judgment and skill. His only request was that the operation be performed in his office, which was 60 miles away. A few days before Christmas, Jane bid her family goodby and started on horseback upon this great adventure, the tumor cradled on the pommel of the saddle. Her family remained behind. At that moment she undoubtedly felt that she might never see them again.

It is hard to imagine how she survived the trip itself and Mosby believes that this ride deserves as much recognition as that of Paul Revere, Sheridan, or the charge of the light brigade. After all, such men were stimulated by war and patriotism; Jane Crawford was inspired by courage, faith, and the will to live.

On December 24, 1809, the operation was performed on a table in McDowell's office. There is no truth in the story that a mob gathered outside waiting to hang the surgeon if his patient died. In those days anesthetics, antiseptics, and trained nurses were unknown to the operating room. With a knife and an artery forceps as his only equipment, he removed the 22½ pound tumor. Five days later, Mrs. Crawford was up and about, and even made her own bed.

Visitors to Danville can still see the surgeon's home and the room in which the operation took place. A monument was erected in his honor as the first man to perform this operation satisfactorily. The patient returned to her cabin home, bore more children, and reached the ripe old age of 78.

Unallied

M. M. writes: If a person has arthritis of the finger joints, does this mean that she is more susceptible to hardening of the arteries?

Reply

There is no connection between the two. Older persons may develop certain types of arthritis along with graying hair, wrinkled skin, and hardening of the arteries. But these aging manifestations are unrelated and do not predispose to one another.

There Certainly Is

Mrs. D. O. writes: Is there such a thing as deterioration of the brain? Is it hereditary?

Reply

Yes, hereditary and otherwise. In the majority of cases, aging is a factor; in others, injury or infection.

Nose and Emotions

H. J. writes: Could chronic rhinitis result from a nervous shock?

Reply

Not rhinitis due to allergy or inflammation. On the other hand, nasal symptoms are often aggravated by emotional upsets.

Improves Posture

D. T. writes: Will stretching exercises to reduce the waistline make a person grow taller?

Reply

No, but they may make the individual stand taller.

"Born With" Defect

R. L. C. writes: Is there such a thing as congenital rupture?

Reply

Yes, most hernias are congenital because the condition constitutes a defect or weakness in the development of the underlying parts.

Headache Types

W. H. writes: How does migraine differ from ordinary headache?

Reply

Migraine is more severe, comes on at periodic intervals, is usually located over one side of the head, and in many instances there is a hereditary tendency.

Reply

Yes, because most forms of arthritis are not related to the diet.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Says DREW PEARSON

PHILADELPHIA, June 23—The supporters of statesmanlike Senator Vandenberg should have known that hell hath no fury like a woman scorned. Their biggest mistake at the opening of the Convention was to kick out Mrs. Dudley Hay after her many years of hard work as National Committeewoman and as Secretary of the GOP National Committee.

For thereby hangs a tale of political finagling which goes straight to the doors of some of the biggest Republican leaders in Michigan—a tale which does not help the presidential future of Arthur Vandenberg.

Some time ago, two big-shot Michigan gamblers, Danny Sullivan and Lincoln Fitzgerald, were indicted and immediately became fugitives from justice. Skipping to Nevada, they established the Nevada Club in wide-open Reno and stayed there ,thumbing their noses at Michigan law.

Efforts to have them extradited on the part of Ed Jacobs, McComb County Prosecutor, failed.

Finally, Jacobs and Mrs. Dudley Hay, Secretary of the Republican National Committee, went to Washington, enlisted the support of Senator Malone of Nevada, and he in turn appealed to Senator Vail Pittman, of Nevada, who immediately moved to send Danny Sullivan and Lincoln Fitzgerald back to the arms of the law in Michigan.

From that moment on, says Mrs. Hay, her chances of re-election as Republican National Committeewoman from Michigan were nil. County Prosecutor Jacobs bears her out. The big GOP leaders of Michigan turned thumbs down.

Campaign Contributions

The Michigander who led the ouster of Mrs. Hay was Arthur Summerfield, Republican National Committeeman, also one of the vigorous urgers of Vandenberg for President.

Summerfield has been president of the Detroit Automobile Dealers Association, which, during the war, worked out a deal with the State whereby its books were not audited for payment of the sales taxes. The dealers were supposed to pay the tax without any audit.

Now it develops that some of them did not pay sales taxes and they have been indicted. Simultaneously Michigan Attorney General Eugene Black charges that though the auto dealers did not pay taxes to the State, they did pay GOP campaign contributions to Mr. Summerfield. They could afford one but not the other. In fact, Summerfield held one meeting of the auto dealers at which they agreed to an assessment of $1 for every car sold in 1947—this money to go into the COP campaign chest for Vandenberg.

Attorney General Black, himself a Republican, strongly hints that this donation to the Republican Party was tied up with the deal whereby the auto dealers did not have their books audited for sales-tax payments. Black has also stated that he planned to bring Summerfield hilmself before a grand jury just as soon as the Republican Convention is over.

Behind the Scenes

Another backstage development inside the Michigan group was a private conference between Senator Vandenberg and Frank McKay, big-shot Republican leader of Michigan and head of the gambling fraternity. McKay, who comes from Grand Rapids, has always been a political backer of Vandenberg, in addition to being a powerful wirepuller in the liquor and race-track fraternity.

McKay was a defendant in a famous trial involving graft and corruption in the sale of liquor, along with a bunch of minor goons and gangsters, but got off after two hung juries. He has also been indicted on other counts but never convicted.

William McKeighen, former mayor of Flint and a close associate of McKay's, was also indicted along with the two gamblers, Sullivan and Fitzgerald. He also has been a fugitive from justice.

McKay traveled on the same train to Philadelphia with the Vandenberg forces and has been snug-as-a-bug-in-a-rug with them since.

Politicians recognize that a senator sometimes has to compromise with political leaders back home to be re-elected, but many also feel that with President Truman's weakest spot the Pendergast machine in Kansas City, the Republicans should be careful that their candidate, while a great statesman internationally, does not have clay feet.

GOP-Go-Round

Jim Farley created a hubbub by bobbing up at Republican headquarters. . . . "Aren't you a little early?" asked a reporter. Jim only grinned. . . . Most conspicuous convention absentee is Walter Brown of Ohio, former Postmaster General and GOP "Kingmaker." Brown has been a familiar figure at every Republican conclave since 1920 when he put Warren Harding across in the famous "smoke-filled" hotel room. Defeated for this convention in a delegate race, Brown remarked: "Guess I'll get caught up on my fishing." . . . While older delegates concentrate on hard bargaining in convention lobbies, younger ones swap war experiences and display snapshots of new babies. . . . Newsmen are betting that Chicago Tribune Publisher Bert McCormick picked up the check for that swank dinner Gov. Dwight Green threw for 750 delegates and Illinois political leaders. . . . Philadelphia police did a good preconvention job of rounding up pickpockets and loiterers for the protection of delegates. All suspicious characters with past records were brigged for 90 days. . . . When bustling, ubiquitous Senator Wayland "Curly" Brooks of Illinois was introduced to a GOP precinct committeeman, he confided: "It's tougher holding a job like yours than getting elected to the Senate. I was a precinct committeeman for eight years."

Convention Chaff

Eisenhower's ex-Mess Sergeant Marty Snyder invaded Philadelphia in a jeep to distribute "I'm for Ike" buttons among the Republicans. He thinks prospects will look up when the Democrats take over Philadelphia. . . . As the Convention wore on the giveaways mounted. . . . Governor Warren's supporters almost drowned eager visitors in California orange juice. . . . The Taft forces were first on the street with free neckties. . . . The Stassenites followed with free neckties, too, then came up with a huge 50 pound Wisconsin cheese carved up for all visitors. When the cheese gave out the Stassen adherents switched to free iced tea with California lemons (an effort to woo Warren's backing no doubt). . . . Supporters of Senator Vandenberg invaded the streets with red and gold ribbons inscribed, "The bell tolls two." . . . Half the Michigan delegation objected to the little-understood slogan. Actually it is a takeoff on Lloyds, famous insurance company, which tolls the bell twice when a ship completes a safe voyage.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Uncontrolled And Unled

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—Democracy, in its truest sense, is direct participation of the people in the decisions of government. It is often, and correctly, suggested that the New England Town Meeting comes closest to a truly Democratic institution. Actually, the Republican Convention this year is an enlarged Town Meeting, with much of the same independence of action and speech that my neighbors in Sandisfield, Mass., express at their sessions.

No one bosses this convention. No Mark Hanna has made himself felt. No great leader has been produced either by the course of events or by outstanding speech. In the various candidates' headquarters, the conversation indicates that this is equally true within the States. The voting, for several ballots, will indicate that delegates are voting independently, and in the effort to influence votes, the drummers and solicitors are approaching not outstanding personalities, but individual delegates.

That is one reason why, on this morning, it is possible to say that no candidate can with any approach to assurance tell even his best friend that he knows he will be nominated.

That also is the reason, I am sure, why the opening sessions of the convention have produced relatively mild cheering and applause. There has been no demonstration for anybody. Clare Luce nearly created one when she interjected Vandenberg's name in a speech where it did not belong.

Clare was so beautiful—perhaps lovely is a more accurate description—that one readily can forgive what in another would have been regarded as a major impropriety; namely, to attempt to jump the gun in favor of a candidate prior to actual nomination. The applause was wild and Mrs. Luce sought to stimulate it by smiles and by upward gesticulations, but it died and cleverly she mentioned other candidates to cover the floperoo.

If anyone could have stimulated a demonstration, Clare Luce could have done it after the unnecessarily elongated speech by Governor Green, and the heat of the lights and the general annoyance with the ushers and pages who are overtrained and forget that the delegates own the convention and that the press and photographers are there to accommodate the Republican Party and not the other way around. Whoever trained that crew must have seen service in Kaiser Wilhelm's Germany Army. Not only is a sense of humor lacking but such a rigidity appears in mind and body as to create a general impression of uniformed nuisances. Certainly in their effort to prevent gate crashers, they act as though they were the masters, not temporary jobholders. Also, I want to see the day when a press photographer breaks his camera over the head of a stuffed shirt who exhibits a moment of authority by pushing men around. These temporary great men are like temporary gentlemen: they shrivel on exposure.

In that sort of atmosphere, relief in the form of a noisy, shouting, gesticulating demonstration is like a seventh-inning stretch at a ball game. But it did not happen. The Luce effort for Vandenberg aborted. That does not mean that he might not, in a pinch, be nominated. It does mean that no one is more popular than either Taft or Dewey. This convention will be pleased if either Taft or Dewey is nominated for the Presidency.

It seems not to have any particular taste for a compromise choice. That seems to be the gist of conversation as one moves among delegates. It will be a disappointed convention if the candidate is a resort to compromise. There is sentiment for Taft; there is sentiment for Dewey. That is among delegates.

There is no pronounced sentiment for Stassen or Vandenberg or anybody else for a compromise.

Talk today is that neither Taft nor Dewey has enough. Both sides claim victory; both believe that there is a trend to their candidate. Whatever truth there is in those statements may be disclosed before this article appears, but what is of permanent interest is that the delegates would prefer either Taft or Dewey and no one else. That is why sentiment is so evenly divided between these two and why the convention has become a horse race.

Dewey Better Than An Even Bet To Win The Nomination

By DAVID LAWRENCE

PHILADELPHIA, June 23 — The strength of Dewey is best attested by the desperate efforts on the part of managers for other candidates to stop him. On every side there is talk of a "Stop Dewey" strategy, but it merely indicates that the New York governor is the leading candidate. Despite the attempts at invasion of his ranks, no important defections have been reported.

The Taft managers and the strategists for some of the other candidates, particularly Stassen, have been trying to line up a combination to block Dewey, but all the estimates of their combined strength do not seem like an alliance that really can prevent Dewey's triumph. At present writing, it looks like Dewey will win not later than the fifth ballot, and possibly as early as the second or third.

Vandenberg Against Martin

Senator Vandenberg could easily have been the nominee of this convention but he has restrained his supporters while permitting the governor of Michigan to say that he is "available", the Senator has made no further move. The purpose of the "available" statement, it appears now, was to set up a threat against a possible nomination of Speaker Martin or Bricker or some candidate out of sympathy with the international program championed by Senator Vandenberg.

Michigan For Vandenberg

The Michigan delegation, on the other hand, has lost none of its enthusiasm for Senator Vandenberg and the members are working hard to line up delegates in the event that the Dewey strength does not reach a majority on the fourth or fifth ballot. It is agreed that Vandenberg would come along strongly if Dewey doesn't go over the top early. So apparently there is no inconsistency between efforts to get second choices for Vandenberg and the attitude of detachment assumed by the Senator himself.

Dewey however, is better than an even bet tonight.

MATTER OF FACT

By JOSEPH And STEWART ALSOP

The Basket Of Eels

PHILADELPHIA.

THE central figure of the opening phase of the Republican convention is the brisk, competent, ambitious Governor of New York. Thomas E. Dewey wants the Presidency so badly he can taste it. He is so close to getting the Republican nomination that he must already imagine he hears the deafening delicious roar of the ovation for the victor. He is pressing so hard that irreverent gossips say he has already promised a single, unhappily indivisible Collectorship of the Bureau of Internal Revenue to no less than three of the hungry faithful. And he would have the thing in the bag if a few people liked him just a little bit better.

The leaders whose dislike threatens Governor Dewey are Harold Stassen, Governor Earl Warren of California and Governor James Duff of Pennsylvania. If these three should combine with Governor Driscoll of New Jersey to start a boom for Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Dewey's chance of being nominated would be drastically reduced. Or if Harold Stassen should agree to support Senator Robert A. Taft in return for second place on the ticket, Taft would become a very real challenge to his New York rival.

A Taft-Stassen ticket has been a secret Taft objective for some time, although Taft was reading Stassen out of the Republican Party only a few weeks ago. In the squalid closing hours of the Congress, Taft's Philadelphia floor manager, Congressman George Bender, was talking a Taft-Stassen deal to every Stassenite in sight. Now the idea of the deal has been publicly endorsed by no less a titan than Colonel Robert R. McCormick, whose eagerness to get Taft into the Presidency seems to have overcome his detestation for Stassen. The story behind all this mystifying maneuvering casts a rather sharp, unlovely light, both on the character of this convention and on Governor Dewey's problem.

Dewey's problem, essentially, is to capture one of the big state delegations which, added to his present strength, should carry his bandwagon across the finish line. All things considered, Illinois has long been about his best bet. The Illinois favorite son is Governor Dwight Green, who is just the sort of politician who could be expected to make his way as Colonel McCormick's creature. Under McCormick's influence Illinois is committed to Taft. But there are already at least eight Dewey men in the group, and over forty of the Illinois delegates are state office-holders. If Green could be induced to break away from McCormick, the officeholders would follow. Taft would lose Illinois.

Accordingly, some time ago, it began to be known that Dewey was trying to tempt Governor Green, who longs to ascend to the empyrean of national politics. What must coarsely be called a deal seems to have been offered. Green was to defy the terrifying lightnings of the Colonel's wrath. He was to lead his office-holders into the Dewey camp at the right moment. And Dewey was to reward Green with the Vice Presidency, the Secretaryship of National Defense or some other plum.

Since Oregon, Harold Stassen has been almost more eager to defeat Dewey than to be nominated himself. He evidently got wind of the temptations being spread before the convention, and took the remarkable step of warning the Colonel that Dewey and Green were plotting behind his august back. At that time, the Colonel made no visible sign. Since then, reports have continuously circulated, both that Greene would yield to Dewey's temptations, and that Stassen would join with Taft. The Colonel's indorcement of a Taft-Stassen ticket suggests that Dewey is to be denied his hoped-for Illinois support (although of course Green is still perfectly capable of giving a good sharp bite to the hand that fed him, if he only dares). The question remains whether Stassen will accept McCormick's peculiar suggestion of making a deal with Taft.

On this point, two facts can be stated authoritatively. In the first place, Stassen himself has explained to several callers that his co-operation with Taft against Dewey, in such matters as the seating of the Georgia delegation, is aimed exclusively at Dewey. Stassen's purpose, he says, is to hurt Dewey greatly without helping Taft much. In the second place, a leading pro-Taft business man from Stassen's native Twin Cities went to Stassen last night and offered him the Vice-Presidency, cold turkey, if he would back Taft for first place. Without hesitation, Stassen turned the offer down flat. But will he change his mind now?

Stassen is intensely ambitious and has sometimes made grave concessions to expediency. He has never yet shown himself, however, to be as totally unprincipled as supporting Taft (whose views are the exact opposite of his own) would prove him. Although the vagaries of the human heart are difficult to predict, it is still an odds-on bet that Stassen will not get with Taft.

But if Dewey is not to be menaced by a Taft-Stassen deal, he has still to deal with the possible combination of Governors Warren, Duff, Driscoll and Stassen in favor of Vandenberg. The formation of such a combination will be of an immensely complex operation, involving the inter-action of all sorts of factors of vanity and ambition. The Vandenberg underground, which includes some very shrewd operators, is working on the project. If Illinois is really beyond Dewey's reach, the task of the Vandenberg underground will be rendered far easier. But the combination is not formed yet. Furthermore, if the underground looks like being able to put Vandengerg over, there is always the last-minute possibility that Dewey will benefit by switches of Taft strength. Such a political basket of eels is this convention, which is to settle the fate of the United States and the World.

Today's Talk

Ben Hur Lampman

Many years ago, while on a visiting tour of the West, I was told about a writer on the Portland Oregonian, by name Ben Hur Lampman. I went to see him and found him a most modest and delightful human being. His interest in nature and his talk about birds, animals, and in fact everything in general, fascinated me. When I left him he handed me a little book of poems and essays that he had just had published.

I read this little book on my way home and later sent for everything that he had ever had published, and began interesting others in his work.

The late Dr. John H. Finley once stated that he considered Ben Hur Lampman as one of the five best editorial writers in the country, and Edward A. Weeks, editor of the Atlantic Monthly, considers him "the best teller of the colloquial tale since Ring Lardner."

Different authorities have likened this writer to Thoreau, John Muir, and others—but he is unlike any of them, save in his spirit. He stands alone. There is no writer whom I know of, quite like him. You read one of his stories, or poems, and you want to read another. Then he gets into your blood. But, before you realize it, he somehow gets into your heart, and you love the man.

Ben Hur Lampman's latest book is called "The Wild Swan," a collection of stories that suggest pure genius. He's folksy, to suggest a word that fits so many of his stories. The dominating notes to all that he writes are simplicity and sincerity. He writes of the everyday in life, and whether of the old lady "at the end of the car line," of the dog Blinker, or of "Old Bill"—it's all the same. You read, drawn to the writer and to the character, or to the scene portrayed.

Many of the stories in this book will bring a smile, and many will find their place in your heart, but there is a high spirit in them all. Ben Hur Lampman knows his Oregon, but he knows the human heart better. And the flowers know him, the streams, and the forest. He is a part of them. This book of Ben Hur Lampman's is one that should lie close to where you go for your rest at night. Reading one of his forty-four sketches at that time—and many of them again and again—is sure to make you a happier human being the next morning!

Only one problem left to solve before they open up in Philadelphia. Which party is Hankus Wallace going to bolt?

The Nature Boy of politics will do something sensational before the week's out. All of Hank's burnt offerings are flashlight powders.

The old boy is as modest as rabbit ears on a mouse. Hank is the reason they put observation platforms on the last car. They don't want backseat drivers bothering the engineer.

In my opinion Hankus will accept any nomination whether it is offered to him or not.

Not a vice president in the house. Recently President Truman and Mrs. Truman attended a concert, given by the musicians union, as guests of James C. Petrillo, the other president.

President Truman was happy to be there. He was eager to compare techniques.

And Petrillo was surely glad to have him. After the concert, he took the President aside and collected his dues.

However, when the orchestra played "Hail To the Chief," they almost had an incident . . . Petrillo thought they meant him.

The President wanted to have a word with Petrillo privately and he said, "Don't forget this is off the record." Petrillo said, "Mr. President, as far as I'm concerned, nothing is on the record."

The two leaders got very chatty and the President asked Petrillo what he thought of Harry James. Petrillo was afraid to ask the President what he thought of Taft.

Of course, they only got along so well because they had so much in common. In fact, they spent over an hour reporting to each other on the state of the union.

Many guesses may be made as to the importance of this meeting, but to me it adds up to only one thing. President Truman is getting his band wagon in shape.

It Says Here

By BOB HOPE

Not a vice president in the house. Recently President Truman and Mrs. Truman attended a concert, given by the musicians union, as guests of James C. Petrillo, the other president.

President Truman was happy to be there. He was eager to compare techniques.

And Petrillo was surely glad to have him. After the concert, he took the President aside and collected his dues.

However, when the orchestra played "Hail To the Chief," they almost had an incident . . . Petrillo thought they meant him.

The President wanted to have a word with Petrillo privately and he said, "Don't forget this is off the record." Petrillo said, "Mr. President, as far as I'm concerned, nothing is on the record."

The two leaders got very chatty and the President asked Petrillo what he thought of Harry James. Petrillo was afraid to ask the President what he thought of Taft.

Of course, they only got along so well because they had so much in common. In fact, they spent over an hour reporting to each other on the state of the union.

Many guesses may be made as to the importance of this meeting, but to me it adds up to only one thing. President Truman is getting his band wagon in shape.

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I am a girl of 15 and I am having trouble at home with my father.

Do you think I am old enough to go with boys to the movies and to church dances? My father will not permit me to go. He thinks I am still a baby.

One of the senior boys at high school asked me to go out with him for graduation. I said yes, because I like him and would enjoy myself. If I ask my mother if I can go, she will let me because she is the swellest mother anyone could have, but if I ask my father, he won't. Please tell me what to do.

"WORRIED."

Dear "Worried": It seems to me that your situation is one in which your mother should take the responsibility and not leave it to you to decide whether her permission or your father's is the one that should determine what you should do. I see no reason in the world why you should not go out with this boy or with any other nice boy to events your parents approve. And I think if your mother is willing for you to do so, you have a perfect right to go, and let her handle your father.

Stay Out Of This Affair

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I am 18 and live with my aunt. My cousin, also 18, is planning to be married soon to a fellow in the Navy, but she is scared to tell her mother of her plans because she knows she won't approve of their marriage while this boy is still in service. He has 2½ years to serve.

I would like very much to be my cousin's witness at her wedding as we have always been as close as sisters. I don't want to do anything to make my aunt mad at me but I would like to do this one last thing for my cousin as she and her boy friend both want me to.

Do you think it would be wrong for me to go away secretly with her and stand up with her, or should I not bother and figure it is none of my business?

"UNCERTAIN".

Dear "Uncertain": I think you had better keep out of this thing altogether. Whatever your cousin does, you are going to have to keep on living with your aunt, who is certainly going to be very angry if her daughter goes through with her plans to marry without her consent. Your life will not be at all happy when your aunt discovers that you have been a party to deceiving her.

Personally, I think it is a mistake for your cousin to marry so young, especially when the boy will have to be away from her most of the time for so long a period. If you have any influence with her at all, I urge you to try and get her to reconsider her decision.

". . . And if elected I shall make it a law for the loser to take down both his and my campaign posters."

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

They let the Wives in!

The ex-GI's of our town entertained their wives the other night at one of their "feeds" of hamburger sandwiches and ice cold beer. (The girls had hinted that they'd like to see what went on when their husbands got together!)

Being wary, the boys provided chicken sandwiches and cake and cider—for those wives who might have other tastes. But though they were grateful for the choice, most of the wives agreed that hamburger sandwiches and beer were a mighty pleasant combination.

After the "feed" the husbands took their wives on at a game of darts, and later they played "Indications." The party broke up around ten, with the boys agreeing that it was mighty successful.

From where I sit, it's this companionship among young couples today, and their moderation in a sensible beverage like beer, that's won the younger generation such a wholesome reputation.

County Leads In Diphtheria Cases

With two deaths recorded, Allegany County listed 42 cases of diphtheria during the first three months of 1948 to lead the state in the number of cases of this disease, the State Department of Health reported yesterday.

With only 85 cases of diphtheria in the state, Allegany County contributed approximately 49 per cent of them. The combined total of Maryland's other 22 counties was 29 cases. Baltimore had only 14.

One of the two fatalities was reported from Cumberland.

Bedford Road Group To Renew Water Appeal

John T. Fey, attorney for a group of more than 200 Bedford Road residents seeking a water supply from the city, said yesterday he will appear before the Mayor and Council again Monday to press the request of his clients.

Residents of the area have claimed their water supply for 300 homes is not satisfactory and is insufficient to supply the needs of the community.

The city has offered to run a series of eight-inch lines from the main water conduit to Bedford Road, with one of the eight-inch lines intersecting the main line every half mile.

Residents, working in small groups, would then be allowed to lay smaller lines to connect with the main feeders, and pipe water to their homes.

Fish License Fee Increase Desired

State Commission May Seek Boost

BALTIMORE, June 23—(AP)—The State Game and Inland Fish Commission said today it may ask for an increase in license fees in the near future despite a boost in permit sales.

Higher revenues derived from such sales — which have nearly doubled since 1943—are not sufficient for the department "to keep pace with the growing number of hunters and anglers," it said, because of increased labor and material costs.

The commission made these statements in an annual report covering its operations for the fiscal year 1946-47.

It noted elsewhere in the report that muskrats continue to be the most important fur-bearing animals in Maryland. And that the Free State is second only to Louisiana in the value of its fur catch.

Yet while most states with an appreciable fur catch require trappers and buyers to be licensed, Maryland does not, the commission stressed. In fact, trappers and buyers do not even have to keep a record of the kill.

This means, the agency added, that the figures of a catch occasionally more valuable than a season's oyster take "are merely estimates."

It went on: "This department is responsible for administering the fur resources of the state, yet it has no reliable data on which to base its policies."

Commission receipts for the 1946-47 fiscal year totaled $336,257, with expenditures $280,404, the report said.

American Doubles Teams Victorious

LONDON, June 23. — (AP) — Two crack men's doubles teams from the United States got off to impressive starts in the Wimbledon tennis championships today, partly recompensing the huge crowd which eddied through the plant for an otherwise dull program.

Frankie Parker of Los Angeles and his lanky young partner, Bob Falkenburg of Hollywood, showed why they were seeded No. 1 as they scorched to a 6-1, 6-3, 6-0 victory over the South African pair, Bill Muller and Walter Musgrove.

Gardnar Mulloy of Miami, Fla., and Tom Brown of San Francisco, seeded second in the doubles competition, eliminated the strong Yugoslav Davis Cup team of Drago Mitic and Josip Pallada, 9-7, 6-3, 6-4.

The only men's pair seen in action which looked like it might trouble either of the American teams was that of John Bromwich and Frank Sedgman of Australia, which won a smooth 6-4, 6-1, 6-2 decision over the veteran Dutch Davis Cuppers, Ivo Rinkel and Dr. Hans Van Swol.

Moose Defeats Elks In Eighth, 3 To 2

Hite's single with Williams on base scored the winning run as the defending champion L. O. O. Moose tossers edged the B. P. O. Elks 3 to 2 in eight innings, in a Rocking Chair League tilt.

Hite also knotted the score in the sixth frame with a homerun. Frank Fogtman won his eighth game, allowing only two hits after the first inning.

Riehl and J. Wilkinson paced the losers with doubles while Hite and Cessna had two bingles apiece for the Moose.

Games scheduled today find the Amvets meeting the K. of C. at East Side, the League-leading F. O. Eagles colliding with the Moose in the feature game of the day at Fort Hill, the Outdoor Club playing host to the Elks at Campobello and the Celanese invades the Rolling Mill to meet Potomac Edison. CHALLENGER WAVES-- Jersey Joe Walcott (center) has a big smile and a cheerful hand wave for onlookers while the champ, Joe Louis, is serious and "deadpan" as they weigh in at New York for their heavyweight title fight. The bout was postponed until tonight because of bad weather shortly after this picture was taken. Louis tipped the scales at 213½, more than he has ever weighed in a title scrap, and Walcott weighed 194¾ pounds.

The Greatest Heavyweight

Starting back with Jim Corbett's victory over John L. Sullivan in New Orleans, 56 years ago — back in 1892 — there have been heated arguments concerning the greatest heavyweight.

This argument came swarming up before the second Louis-Walcott fight at the Yankee Stadium was postponed last night. But the cast has grown. It is no longer a matter of John L. Sullivan and Jim Corbett. Now we have Sullivan, Corbett, Fitzsimmons, Jeffries, Johnson, Dempsey, Tunney and Louis.

You can throw out the others. None of them ever belonged in the fighting world of class — I mean Tommy Burns, Jess Willard, Primo Carnera, Jack Sharkey, Max Baer, Max Schmeling, etc. They were strictly second-raters.

Schmeling knocked out a dopey, dull Joe Louis who got away from Jack Blackburn.

Max Baer wrecked a Schmeling, knocked him out with a swollen right hand. "I could murder Schmeling," Baer told me once, "with two busted hands."

Here is the way I rate the heavyweight fighters — dating back to the days of Corbett. I never saw John L. fight.

1. Best boxers — Corbett, Tunney, Louis.
2. Best punchers — Dempsey, Louis, Fitzsimmons.
3. Best defensive fighters — Jack Johnson, Gene Tunney.
4. Most aggressive fighter — Jack Dempsey.
5. Best combination boxers and punchers —Joe Louis, Bob Fitzsimmons.
6. The top in speed — Jack Dempsey, Jim Corbett. Dempsey led on attack.
7. The top in stamina — Jim Jeffries.
8. The hardest to hurt — Jim Jeffries, Jack Dempsey. You couldn't hurt Jeffries with an axe.
9. Right-hand sucker — Joe Louis.
10. The smartest fighter — Jim Corbett. Next choice; Gene Tunney.

The Top Man

Who is the top man from this group?

We get Jim Corbett, the master boxer. We get Jack Johnson, the top man on defense. We get Jim Jeffries, the hardest man to hurt, the iron man, who could take the most punishment.

We get Gene Tunney, the greatest student in ring history, who believed in the art of self defense. Not a great puncher—but a jolting one.

Then we come to Joe Louis, a fine boxer with a punch in either hand—a fine combination of boxer and puncher in his younger and better years.

Then we come to Jack Dempsey, the ideal fighter, a slashing hitter who came tearing in—the fighter who drew in almost $10,000,000 in gate receipts for six fights.

Dempsey was a two-handed puncher. But his main assets were speed and aggressiveness. Louis is a counter-puncher. Dempsey believed in direct assault. Louis was vulnerable to a punch around the head. Numerous second-raters have knocked him down with this punch. Dempsey could take a much harder punch—and keep his feet. Dempsey was much more aggressive than Louis.

There is little doubt that Jack Dempsey remains the top heavyweight of all time when you consider all the details that make up a heavyweight champion.

When you add up the various important points — speed, power, punching ability, ability to take it — aggressiveness — Jack Dempsey gets the call.

Dempsey was never as good a boxer as either Corbett, Tunney or Jack Johnson. This was due largely to the fact that he concentrated almost entirely upon attack. "It is almost impossible," Jim Corbett told me once, "to be a good boxer and a knockout puncher. They don't belong together."

If Joe Louis carried Dempsey's iron jaw, he would have been much closer to the top.

Amvets Wallop Hyndman, 11-1

George Geatz Fans Nine For Winners

George Geatz hurled a seven-hitter and fanned nine as the Cumberland Amvets walloped the Hyndman VFW, 11-1, yesterday at Hyndman in a Bi-State League game.

Kenneth "Shake" Clark paced the 15-hit attack which routed three Hyndman pitchers with three hits, while "Bee" Scarpelli banged out two triples and Danny Drew collected a double and single as the winners chalked up their tenth win.

Hyndman failed to get a man beyond first base until the seventh inning when they scored their lone tally. Lonay and Barndollar headed the losers' with two bingles apiece.

Bobby Miller's catch of Straus's long line drive in the third inning was the fielding gem of the contest. The score:

Umpire Is Fined In Eastern Loop

EASTON, Md., June 23—(AP)—You can say what you like about the brand of baseball played in the Eastern Shore League, but no one would venture that things get dull in the Class D circuit.

Today Ernie De Fazio, Easton second baseman, was indefinitely suspended and a $5 fine was slapped on—of all people—Umpire Marty Vogel.

Robert Leonard, secretary to League President Dallas D. Culver, notified De Fazio of the suspension. He said it was an aftermath of an incident earlier this week in which the infielder tried to take a poke at Paul Nicholas, Cambridge shortstop.

Leonard said the fine on Vogel was brought on by the umpire's failure to obey Delaware state police after a recent game in Dover.

The cops instructed Vogel to remain on the field until after the grandstands were vacated, Leonard said, but the man in blue ignored them and "tried to elbow his way through a hostile crowd."

'27 Yanks Won 110 Games For Pennant

Many observers call the New York Yankees' 1927 club the greatest baseball team ever assembled.

Those '27 Yanks had a team batting average of .307, with Lou Gehrig tops at .373. The team's eight regulars—first baseman Gehrig, second baseman Tony Lazzeri, shortstop Mark Koenig, third baseman Jumping Joe Dugan, outfielders Earle Combs, Bob Meusel and Babe Ruth and catcher Ray Grabowski averaged .324.

They led the league from first day and finished with 110 victories and 44 defeats for .714 percentage.

The Helms Athletic Foundation has recognized the late Captain Bill Guckeyson, great University of Maryland athlete as a nominee before the board, for their Hall of Fame.

Senators Topple Detroit, 2-1, On Two Tiger Errors

Fifth Consecutive Loss For Bengals

DETROIT, June 23. — (AP) — The Washington Senators stubbornly retired the Tigers three times after the bases were loaded today and finally whipped them 2-1 with two unearned runs.

It was a heartbreaker for Paul (Dizzy) Trout, who pitched a four-hitter for Detroit. Four Washington pitchers were nicked for six blows.

Detroit's smallest crowd of the season, 6,271, saw the visitors chalk up their first marker in the fifth when Dick Wakefield muffed Eddie Yost's fly and Earl Harrist scooted home. The second run was set up in the sixth by Paul Campbell's wild throw which allowed Gil Coan to advance to third.

The Tigers' single run was also unearned. It came in the fourth when Johnny Lipon walked with the bases loaded.

Earl Harrist, who took over on the mound for the Senators from Walt Masterson, was credited with the victory.

Williams Takes Lead In All-Star Vote

CHICAGO, June 23. (AP) — Ted Williams has the highest batting average in the major leagues and the largest individual vote in the all-star baseball poll today.

The slugging Boston Red Sox left fielder regained the lead in the balloting to determine the starting lineups in the 15th annual interleague game at St. Louis, July 13.

Williams, who led from the poll's opening June 15 until last Saturday, when Lou Boudreau of the Cleveland Indians went temporarily in front, has a 1,641 vote advantage over Joe DiMaggio, New York Yankees center fielder. DiMaggio was the most powerful player in the 1947 poll. Williams has been named on 85,082 of the 281,898 ballots tabulated. DiMaggio has collected 84,341, while Boudreau slipped to third place with 83,156.

Trout Are Stocked; 2 Fishermen Fined

KEYSER, W. Va. — Two Kitzmiller, Md., men, a few days early for bass fishing, were fined $24.75 each at a hearing before Justice of the Peace Madalyn Bazzle recently.

Seventeen thousand fingerling trout were placed in the headwaters of New Creek, Block Run and Pine Run Tuesday, the conservation officer reported. Members of the Piedmont Fish and Game Association assisted in the work, Rice added. Half of the trout were rainbow and the other half brook, he said.

Canada's Davis Cup Team Plays On U. S. Courts

Get Used To Grass; American Trained

By GEORGE A. BOWEN

BALTIMORE, June 23 — (AP) — United States shares are going to influence greatly the rise and fall of Canada's Davis Cup tennis stock in 1948.

The U. S. interests are Baltimore Grass, an American coach, and players trained at a Virginia College.

The Canadians sent their five top net players to the Baltimore Country Club to get used to playing on grass for their first round North American zone match in Montreal with Mexico July 7-9.

Because of the difference in weather, Canada's grass courts aren't ready yet and the players would be handicapped in trying to make the switch from clay.

Difference Is Noted

The difference between grass and clay was readily apparent today as the five players, Brenden and Jim Mackmen, Henri Rouchon, Walt Stohlberg and Jim Skelton, got their first real workout since arriving a week ago.

Maken explained that the Baltimore grass is largely clover and about the heaviest the Canadians have encountered.

Jim at 22 is the younger of the Macken brothers who came down to William and Mary College. Brenden, 25 years old, graduated this month and is seeking a Canadian Davis Cup berth for the third straight year.

Brendan was eligible for only two years at William and Mary. Playing in 1945 and 1946 when the Virginia tennis team started an unbroken string of 59 intercollegiate victories. Jim came along in 1946 and won 28 out of 30 matches.

American Is Coach

Coaching the quintet is Leo Christie, a Lowell, Mass., native but an adopted Canadian since 1921, when he went there to teach in the winter. Christie also coached the 1924, 1925 and 1932 Canadian Davis Cup teams.

He is well acquainted with the ability of the Mackens and Rouchon, having helped them polish their games as juniors at the Montreal Indoor Tennis Club.

Ross Wilson, the non-playing captain and former Davis Cupper himself, arrived only today and admitted he couldn't tell which four of the five would be named for the team. The selections, two singles players and a double combination, must be made by next week.

Christie felt confident any of the four will have a great chance of beating Mexico and then the winner of the Australia-Cuba round. But as for going farther than that against the European and United States combinations, the coach pursed his lips in doubt.

New Long Distance Swim Record Set

NEW HAVEN, June 23. (AP) — Allen Stack, Yale's backstroke swimming ace yesterday set what was claimed to be a new American long course record for 150 yards when he covered the distance in 1:34.5.

A Yale spokesman said Stack's feat in the 50-yard Payne Whitney pool here exceeded the listed American long course record of 1:35.6 which was set by Adolph Kiefer at Honolulu in 1942. Kiefer also holds the world's short course record in 1:30.4 which he established in a 25-yard pool at Honolulu May 24, 1941.

The original story on Stack's record yesterday said it was a 50-yard mark.

Bout Goes On Tonight; Odds On Champ Fall

More Showers Are Predicted Today

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK, June 23 (AP)—A forecast of showers and thundershowers for both Thursday and Friday threatens to delay further the Joe Louis-Jersey Joe Walcott heavyweight championship fight.

The weather bureau's 9:30 p. m. (EST) prediction was: "Partly cloudy with afternoon showers and thundershowers."

NEW YORK, June 23 (AP)—Showers forced a one-day postponement of Joe Louis' 25th heavyweight title defense today and fresh Jersey Joe Walcott money continued to slice the betting odds.

Louis now is a 5 to 11 favorite with indications it might be only 1 to 2 by ring time tomorrow night (9 p. m. EST) in the Yankee Stadium.

Even as Promoter Mike Jacobs was announcing the postponement, the rain was beating against the Twentieth Century Sporting Club windows and the weatherman was issuing another unfavorable forecast.

More Rain Expected

Considerable cloudiness and more showers are expected tomorrow. In the event of more rain, the fight will be put over until Friday. The crowd still was estimated at 55,000 and the receipts "between $800,000 and $900,000."

Louis, deadpan as usual, scaled 213½ pounds, the heaviest of his career, at the noon weigh-in at Madison Square Garden. Jersey Joe, smiling for the photographers, hit 194¾ pounds.

Not a word was exchanged between the two 34-year-old Joes either during the weigh-in or the physical examination by Dr. Vincent Nardiello, New York State Athletic Commission physician. Dr Nardiello found Louis "physically and mentally better than in December" for his first fight with Jersey Joe. Walcott's condition was labeled "excellent."

In judging the fighters' reaction to the layoff, it was recalled that Louis was knocked out by Max Schmeling for his first and only loss in his pro career after a postponement in 1936. Then again in 1937 in his first title defense, the Tommy Farr bout was put off four days and the challenger went the limit.

Dr. Nardiello, who examined Louis at the time of the first Schmeling fight, recalled that Joe was not able to sleep the night before the bout. He said he did not think either would be seriously affected by this rainout.

The champ was hustled back to his Pompton Lakes, N. J., training base after the decision to postpone. He was to work out lightly tonight, punching the heavy bag and doing calisthenics, returning to New York tomorrow afternoon.

Walcott Stays In N. Y.

Under New York state rules there will be no weigh-in tomorrow but the fighters are supposed to hit the scales again if there is a 48-hour postponement. They may waive that second weigh-in by agreement of the managers if Chairman Eddie Eagan of the boxing commission agrees.

When he walked into the crowded Garden lobby under the full glare of the movie photographers' lights, Walcott showed no signs of being aware of Louis' return bout jinx. The fate of Billy Conn, Max Schmeling, Bob Pastor and the others apparently meant nothing to him.

Waving to the camera men Walcott stuck up four fingers in a sort of double V-for-victory salute. It was taken to mean that he expected to win in four. If so, that's more than he has said throughout his training grind when he steadfastly refused to name a round except to say that he expected to win.

Eagan warned both fighters that there must be no external use of grease on the arms or body. The Louis camp has announced it would protest against such use by Walcott.

Fish License Fee Increase Desired

State Commission May Seek Boost

BALTIMORE, June 23—(AP)—The State Game and Inland Fish Commission said today it may ask for an increase in license fees in the near future despite a boost in permit sales.

Higher revenues derived from such sales — which have nearly doubled since 1943—are not sufficient for the department "to keep pace with the growing number of hunters and anglers," it said, because of increased labor and material costs.

The commission made these statements in an annual report covering its operations for the fiscal year 1946-47.

It noted elsewhere in the report that muskrats continue to be the most important fur-bearing animals in Maryland. And that the Free State is second only to Louisiana in the value of its fur catch.

Yet while most states with an appreciable fur catch require trappers and buyers to be licensed, Maryland does not, the commission stressed. In fact, trappers and buyers do not even have to keep a record of the kill.

This means, the agency added, that the figures of a catch occasionally more valuable than a season's oyster take "are merely estimates."

It went on: "This department is responsible for administering the fur resources of the state, yet it has no reliable data on which to base its policies."

Commission receipts for the 1946-47 fiscal year totaled $336,257, with expenditures $280,404, the report said.

American Doubles Teams Victorious

LONDON, June 23. — (AP) — Two crack men's doubles teams from the United States got off to impressive starts in the Wimbledon tennis championships today, partly recompensing the huge crowd which eddied through the plant for an otherwise dull program.

Frankie Parker of Los Angeles and his lanky young partner, Bob Falkenburg of Hollywood, showed why they were seeded No. 1 as they scorched to a 6-1, 6-3, 6-0 victory over the South African pair, Bill Muller and Walter Musgrove.

Gardnar Mulloy of Miami, Fla., and Tom Brown of San Francisco, seeded second in the doubles competition, eliminated the strong Yugoslav Davis Cup team of Drago Mitic and Josip Pallada, 9-7, 6-3, 6-4.

The only men's pair seen in action which looked like it might trouble either of the American teams was that of John Bromwich and Frank Sedgman of Australia, which won a smooth 6-4, 6-1, 6-2 decision over the veteran Dutch Davis Cuppers, Ivo Rinkel and Dr. Hans Van Swol.

Moose Defeats Elks In Eighth, 3 To 2

Hite's single with Williams on base scored the winning run as the defending champion L. O. O. Moose tossers edged the B. P. O. Elks 3 to 2 in eight innings, in a Rocking Chair League tilt.

Hite also knotted the score in the sixth frame with a homerun. Frank Fogtman won his eighth game, allowing only two hits after the first inning.

Riehl and J. Wilkinson paced the losers with doubles while Hite and Cessna had two bingles apiece for the Moose.

Games scheduled today find the Amvets meeting the K. of C. at East Side, the League-leading F. O. Eagles colliding with the Moose in the feature game of the day at Fort Hill, the Outdoor Club playing host to the Elks at Campobello and the Celanese invades the Rolling Mill to meet Potomac Edison. CHALLENGER WAVES-- Jersey Joe Walcott (center) has a big smile and a cheerful hand wave for onlookers while the champ, Joe Louis, is serious and "deadpan" as they weigh in at New York for their heavyweight title fight. The bout was postponed until tonight because of bad weather shortly after this picture was taken. Louis tipped the scales at 213½, more than he has ever weighed in a title scrap, and Walcott weighed 194¾ pounds.

The Sportlight

by GRANTLAND RICE

The Greatest Heavyweight

Starting back with Jim Corbett's victory over John L. Sullivan in New Orleans, 56 years ago — back in 1892 — there have been heated arguments concerning the greatest heavyweight.

This argument came swarming up before the second Louis-Walcott fight at the Yankee Stadium was postponed last night. But the cast has grown. It is no longer a matter of John L. Sullivan and Jim Corbett. Now we have Sullivan, Corbett, Fitzsimmons, Jeffries, Johnson, Dempsey, Tunney and Louis.

You can throw out the others. None of them ever belonged in the fighting world of class — I mean Tommy Burns, Jess Willard, Primo Carnera, Jack Sharkey, Max Baer, Max Schmeling, etc. They were strictly second-raters.

Max Baer wrecked a Schmeling, knocked him out with a swollen right hand. "I could murder Schmeling," Baer told me once, "with two busted hands."

1. Best boxers — Corbett, Tunney, Louis.
2. Best punchers — Dempsey, Louis, Fitzsimmons.
3. Best defensive fighters — Jack Johnson, Gene Tunney.
4. Most aggressive fighter — Jack Dempsey.
5. Best combination boxers and punchers —Joe Louis, Bob Fitzsimmons.
6. The top in speed — Jack Dempsey, Jim Corbett. Dempsey led on attack.
7. The top in stamina — Jim Jeffries.
8. The hardest to hurt — Jim Jeffries, Jack Dempsey. You couldn't hurt Jeffries with an axe.
9. Right-hand sucker — Joe Louis.
10. The smartest fighter — Jim Corbett. Next choice; Gene Tunney.

The Top Man

Who is the top man from this group?

We get Jim Corbett, the master boxer. We get Jack Johnson, the top man on defense. We get Jim Jeffries, the hardest man to hurt, the iron man, who could take the most punishment.

We get Gene Tunney, the greatest student in ring history, who believed in the art of self defense. Not a great puncher—but a jolting one.

Then we come to Joe Louis, a fine boxer with a punch in either hand—a fine combination of boxer and puncher in his younger and better years.

Then we come to Jack Dempsey, the ideal fighter, a slashing hitter who came tearing in—the fighter who drew in almost $10,000,000 in gate receipts for six fights.

Dempsey was a two-handed puncher. But his main assets were speed and aggressiveness. Louis is a counter-puncher. Dempsey believed in direct assault. Louis was vulnerable to a punch around the head. Numerous second-raters have knocked him down with this punch. Dempsey could take a much harder punch—and keep his feet. Dempsey was much more aggressive than Louis.

There is little doubt that Jack Dempsey remains the top heavyweight of all time when you consider all the details that make up a heavyweight champion.

When you add up the various important points — speed, power, punching ability, ability to take it — aggressiveness — Jack Dempsey gets the call.

Dempsey was never as good a boxer as either Corbett, Tunney or Jack Johnson. This was due largely to the fact that he concentrated almost entirely upon attack. "It is almost impossible," Jim Corbett told me once, "to be a good boxer and a knockout puncher. They don't belong together."

If Joe Louis carried Dempsey's iron jaw, he would have been much closer to the top.

SKIES ARE CLEAR AT FIGHT TIME AFTER POSTPONEMENT

NEW YORK, June 23. (AP)—Skies were clear tonight at 9 p. m., EST, original scheduled starting time of the Joe Louis-Jersey Joe Walcott heavyweight championship fight at Yankee Stadium.

The bout was postponed until tomorrow night after an early afternoon shower. It cleared up later in the day.

Amvets Wallop Hyndman, 11-1

George Geatz Fans Nine For Winners

George Geatz hurled a seven-hitter and fanned nine as the Cumberland Amvets walloped the Hyndman VFW, 11-1, yesterday at Hyndman in a Bi-State League game.

Kenneth "Shake" Clark paced the 15-hit attack which routed three Hyndman pitchers with three hits, while "Bee" Scarpelli banged out two triples and Danny Drew collected a double and single as the winners chalked up their tenth win.

Hyndman failed to get a man beyond first base until the seventh inning when they scored their lone tally. Lonay and Barndollar headed the losers' with two bingles apiece.

Bobby Miller's catch of Straus's long line drive in the third inning was the fielding gem of the contest. The score:

Umpire Is Fined In Eastern Loop

EASTON, Md., June 23—(AP)—You can say what you like about the brand of baseball played in the Eastern Shore League, but no one would venture that things get dull in the Class D circuit.

Today Ernie De Fazio, Easton second baseman, was indefinitely suspended and a $5 fine was slapped on—of all people—Umpire Marty Vogel.

Robert Leonard, secretary to League President Dallas D. Culver, notified De Fazio of the suspension. He said it was an aftermath of an incident earlier this week in which the infielder tried to take a poke at Paul Nicholas, Cambridge shortstop.

Leonard said the fine on Vogel was brought on by the umpire's failure to obey Delaware state police after a recent game in Dover.

The cops instructed Vogel to remain on the field until after the grandstands were vacated, Leonard said, but the man in blue ignored them and "tried to elbow his way through a hostile crowd."

'27 Yanks Won 110 Games For Pennant

Many observers call the New York Yankees' 1927 club the greatest baseball team ever assembled.

Those '27 Yanks had a team batting average of .307, with Lou Gehrig tops at .373. The team's eight regulars—first baseman Gehrig, second baseman Tony Lazzeri, shortstop Mark Koenig, third baseman Jumping Joe Dugan, outfielders Earle Combs, Bob Meusel and Babe Ruth and catcher Ray Grabowski averaged .324.

They led the league from first day and finished with 110 victories and 44 defeats for .714 percentage.

Senators Topple Detroit, 2-1, On Two Tiger Errors

Fifth Consecutive Loss For Bengals

DETROIT, June 23. — (AP) — The Washington Senators stubbornly retired the Tigers three times after the bases were loaded today and finally whipped them 2-1 with two unearned runs.

It was a heartbreaker for Paul (Dizzy) Trout, who pitched a four-hitter for Detroit. Four Washington pitchers were nicked for six blows.

Detroit's smallest crowd of the season, 6,271, saw the visitors chalk up their first marker in the fifth when Dick Wakefield muffed Eddie Yost's fly and Earl Harrist scooted home. The second run was set up in the sixth by Paul Campbell's wild throw which allowed Gil Coan to advance to third.

The Tigers' single run was also unearned. It came in the fourth when Johnny Lipon walked with the bases loaded.

Williams Takes Lead In All-Star Vote

CHICAGO, June 23. (AP) — Ted Williams has the highest batting average in the major leagues and the largest individual vote in the all-star baseball poll today.

The slugging Boston Red Sox left fielder regained the lead in the balloting to determine the starting lineups in the 15th annual interleague game at St. Louis, July 13.

Williams, who led from the poll's opening June 15 until last Saturday, when Lou Boudreau of the Cleveland Indians went temporarily in front, has a 1,641 vote advantage over Joe DiMaggio, New York Yankees center fielder. DiMaggio was the most powerful player in the 1947 poll. Williams has been named on 85,082 of the 281,898 ballots tabulated. DiMaggio has collected 84,341, while Boudreau slipped to third place with 83,156.

Trout Are Stocked; 2 Fishermen Fined

KEYSER, W. Va. — Two Kitzmiller, Md., men, a few days early for bass fishing, were fined $24.75 each at a hearing before Justice of the Peace Madalyn Bazzle recently.

The two, Otha Evans and George Bernard, were arrested last Friday about 7 p. m. by Claude E. Rice, Mineral County conservation officer, as they were fishing in Patterson Creek near Barksville.

Seventeen thousand fingerling trout were placed in the headwaters of New Creek, Block Run and Pine Run Tuesday, the conservation officer reported. Members of the Piedmont Fish and Game Association assisted in the work, Rice added. Half of the trout were rainbow and the other half brook, he said.

Canada's Davis Cup Team Plays On U. S. Courts

Get Used To Grass; American Trained

By GEORGE A. BOWEN

BALTIMORE, June 23 — (AP) — United States shares are going to influence greatly the rise and fall of Canada's Davis Cup tennis stock in 1948.

The U. S. interests are Baltimore Grass, an American coach, and players trained at a Virginia College.

The Canadians sent their five top net players to the Baltimore Country Club to get used to playing on grass for their first round North American zone match in Montreal with Mexico July 7-9.

Because of the difference in weather, Canada's grass courts aren't ready yet and the players would be handicapped in trying to make the switch from clay.

Difference Is Noted

The difference between grass and clay was readily apparent today as the five players, Brenden and Jim Mackmen, Henri Rouchon, Walt Stohlberg and Jim Skelton, got their first real workout since arriving a week ago.

Maken explained that the Baltimore grass is largely clover and about the heaviest the Canadians have encountered.

Jim at 22 is the younger of the Macken brothers who came down to William and Mary College. Brenden, 25 years old, graduated this month and is seeking a Canadian Davis Cup berth for the third straight year.

Brendan was eligible for only two years at William and Mary. Playing in 1945 and 1946 when the Virginia tennis team started an unbroken string of 59 intercollegiate victories. Jim came along in 1946 and won 28 out of 30 matches.

American Is Coach

Coaching the quintet is Leo Christie, a Lowell, Mass., native but an adopted Canadian since 1921, when he went there to teach in the winter. Christie also coached the 1924, 1925 and 1932 Canadian Davis Cup teams.

He is well acquainted with the ability of the Mackens and Rouchon, having helped them polish their games as juniors at the Montreal Indoor Tennis Club.

Ross Wilson, the non-playing captain and former Davis Cupper himself, arrived only today and admitted he couldn't tell which four of the five would be named for the team. The selections, two singles players and a double combination, must be made by next week.

Christie felt confident any of the four will have a great chance of beating Mexico and then the winner of the Australia-Cuba round. But as for going farther than that against the European and United States combinations, the coach pursed his lips in doubt.

New Long Distance Swim Record Set

NEW HAVEN, June 23. (AP) — Allen Stack, Yale's backstroke swimming ace yesterday set what was claimed to be a new American long course record for 150 yards when he covered the distance in 1:34.5.

A Yale spokesman said Stack's feat in the 50-yard Payne Whitney pool here exceeded the listed American long course record of 1:35.6 which was set by Adolph Kiefer at Honolulu in 1942. Kiefer also holds the world's short course record in 1:30.4 which he established in a 25-yard pool at Honolulu May 24, 1941.

The original story on Stack's record yesterday said it was a 50-yard mark.

Bout Goes On Tonight; Odds On Champ Fall

More Showers Are Predicted Today

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK, June 23 (AP)—A forecast of showers and thundershowers for both Thursday and Friday threatens to delay further the Joe Louis-Jersey Joe Walcott heavyweight championship fight.

The weather bureau's 9:30 p. m. (EST) prediction was: "Partly cloudy with afternoon showers and thundershowers."

NEW YORK, June 23 (AP)—Showers forced a one-day postponement of Joe Louis' 25th heavyweight title defense today and fresh Jersey Joe Walcott money continued to slice the betting odds.

Louis now is a 5 to 11 favorite with indications it might be only 1 to 2 by ring time tomorrow night (9 p. m. EST) in the Yankee Stadium.

Even as Promoter Mike Jacobs was announcing the postponement, the rain was beating against the Twentieth Century Sporting Club windows and the weatherman was issuing another unfavorable forecast.

More Rain Expected

Considerable cloudiness and more showers are expected tomorrow. In the event of more rain, the fight will be put over until Friday. The crowd still was estimated at 55,000 and the receipts "between $800,000 and $900,000."

Louis, deadpan as usual, scaled 213½ pounds, the heaviest of his career, at the noon weigh-in at Madison Square Garden. Jersey Joe, smiling for the photographers, hit 194¾ pounds.

Not a word was exchanged between the two 34-year-old Joes either during the weigh-in or the physical examination by Dr. Vincent Nardiello, New York State Athletic Commission physician. Dr Nardiello found Louis "physically and mentally better than in December" for his first fight with Jersey Joe. Walcott's condition was labeled "excellent."

In judging the fighters' reaction to the layoff, it was recalled that Louis was knocked out by Max Schmeling for his first and only loss in his pro career after a postponement in 1936. Then again in 1937 in his first title defense, the Tommy Farr bout was put off four days and the challenger went the limit.

Dr. Nardiello, who examined Louis at the time of the first Schmeling fight, recalled that Joe was not able to sleep the night before the bout. He said he did not think either would be seriously affected by this rainout.

The champ was hustled back to his Pompton Lakes, N. J., training base after the decision to postpone. He was to work out lightly tonight, punching the heavy bag and doing calisthenics, returning to New York tomorrow afternoon.

Walcott Stays In N. Y.

Walcott decided to stay in town, confining his exercise to a little road work in Central Park.

Under New York state rules there will be no weigh-in tomorrow but the fighters are supposed to hit the scales again if there is a 48-hour postponement. They may waive that second weigh-in by agreement of the managers if Chairman Eddie Eagan of the boxing commission agrees.

When he walked into the crowded Garden lobby under the full glare of the movie photographers' lights, Walcott showed no signs of being aware of Louis' return bout jinx. The fate of Billy Conn, Max Schmeling, Bob Pastor and the others apparently meant nothing to him.

Waving to the camera men Walcott stuck up four fingers in a sort of double V-for-victory salute. It was taken to mean that he expected to win in four. If so, that's more than he has said throughout his training grind when he steadfastly refused to name a round except to say that he expected to win.

Eagan warned both fighters that there must be no external use of grease on the arms or body. The Louis camp has announced it would protest against such use by Walcott.

College Faces Housing Problem In Coming Term

123 Are Registered In Freshman Class

FROSTBURG — Facilities of Frostburg State Teachers' College will be taxed to capacity to accommodate the record enrollment which is expected for the fall term opening in September, according to Miss Lillian C. Compton, president.

Plans are being made to place three students in each of the sleeping rooms of the residence hall, and efforts will be made to find accommodations in private homes for those who cannot be housed at the college.

Besides Maryland, four other states will be represented on the campus in the freshman class, which already numbers 123 students. Sixty-five have registered for teacher education, 20 in the junior college and 48 girls in nurses' training.

In addition to the 123 freshmen, more than 200 upperclassmen have indicated their intention of returning in September.

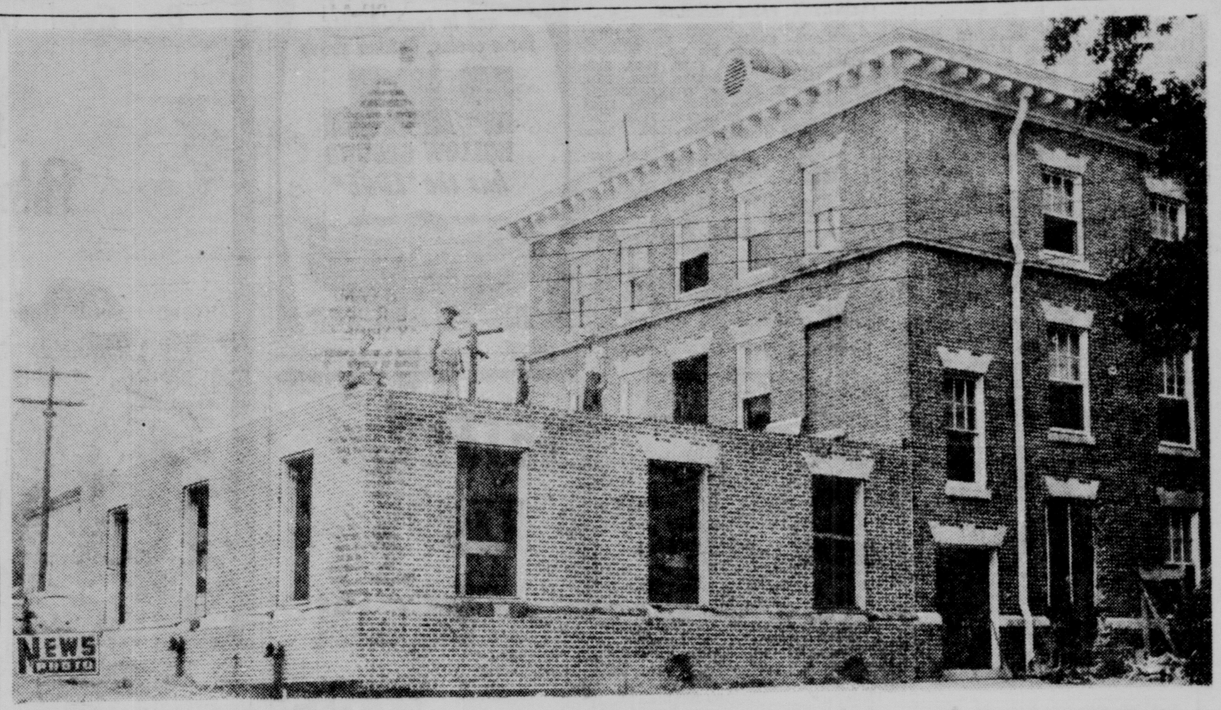

Virtually all rooms in the college residence hall will be repainted and refinished. The interior of the elementary school building will be redecorated, with classrooms to be painted in pastel shades selected by home room teachers.

The day room in the main building has been redecorated in peach and light buff and the library in pale green and yellow.

College Faces Housing Problem In Coming Term

123 Are Registered In Freshman Class

FROSTBURG — Facilities of Frostburg State Teachers' College will be taxed to capacity to accommodate the record enrollment which is expected for the fall term opening in September, according to Miss Lillian C. Compton, president.

Plans are being made to place three students in each of the sleeping rooms of the residence hall, and efforts will be made to find accommodations in private homes for those who cannot be housed at the college.

Besides Maryland, four other states will be represented on the campus in the freshman class, which already numbers 123 students. Sixty-five have registered for teacher education, 20 in the junior college and 48 girls in nurses' training.

In addition to the 123 freshmen, more than 200 upperclassmen have indicated their intention of returning in September.

Virtually all rooms in the college residence hall will be repainted and refinished. The interior of the elementary school building will be redecorated, with classrooms to be painted in pastel shades selected by home room teachers.

The day room in the main building has been redecorated in peach and light buff and the library in pale green and yellow.

GOP Convention To Be On Radio Today And Tonight

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD

NEW YORK, June 23—Another day and night at the Republican national convention in Philadelphia is the plan of television and the radio on Thursday. It's the day when ballotting for the Presidential candidate is scheduled.

All networks and others operating the television chain to nine eastern cities for 18 stations expect to be on the air continuously while the vote is being taken. The radio has decided to transmit simultaneously to the entire station list instead of following the usual split time daylight schedule to meet local clock hours.

So, if the morning session opens at 11 a. m. daylight that will be 10 Eastern Standard. The same if the night schedule begins at 9 Daylight, which corresponds to 8 Standard.

In view of the fact a forecast of the length of the sessions is impossible in advance, the networks have so set up as to cancel any or all programs at the last minute. Thus, any advance scheduling is on an "if" basis.

In addition to the convention itself, both radio and television have planned extra programs for interviews, commentation and the like wherever they might be fitted in handily.

Meanwhile, all CBS programs at 8:30 are now a half-hour instead of 25 minutes now that the 5-minute news spot at 8:55 has been dropped.

BANGKOK, Siam (AP)—Narcotics agents discovered a new trick of dope smugglers here. A passenger disembarked from a vessel from China carrying a cage full of ducks. An alert inspector noticed one duck wasn't quacking or moving about. It turned out to be stuffed—with opium.

RADIO IN REVIEW

By JOHN CROSBY

Television At The Convention

Just before midnight after the first long day of the Republican National Convention, Edward R. Murrow, looking wilted, bored and exhausted, slouched in front of a C. B. S. television camera, chatting fitfully with two of his C. B. S. news colleagues. "It must be the heat," remarked. "Here are three reporters. We've been here ten minutes and all we've said is that nothing much happened today or, if it did, we don't know about it." That pretty well sums up the first day of television's greatest event.

John Crosby

The convention was broadcast over eighteen East Coast stations virtually all day long; nothing much happened before the cameras; and, in spite of it television put on a great show. All day long notables and others who have small claim to that word paraded before the cameras, nobody saying very much but always bringing the expectation that they might; there was an intolerable amount of hand-shaking between radio reporters and delegates. ("Well, glad to have talked to you, Senator. Drop around again."); and many times interviews were conducted with a spirited opening and closing of mouths and no sound came.

We were given glimpses of girls wearing four-leaf clover ties bearing Taft's initials, of Stassen neckties, or rubber elephants and live elephants. We observed the dress of Virginia Davis, daughter of band leader Meyer Davis, which carried portraits of the four leading candidates, and watched with interest as she lifted her skirts to show her real choice, a portrait of Stassen, emblazoned well up on her thigh. Charles Collingwood, C. B. S. reporter, crashed the Union League Club with microphone and camera and went through the receiving line to the dismay and anger of Senator Edward Martin, of Pennsylvania. Another C. B. S. man parked five Hawaiian ladies in front of the cameras, singing for dear life for ten minutes, while he scurried about trying desperately to get somebody — anybody — to interview. Another reporter interviewed an Indian in his native costume and native language.

Mary Margaret McBride sparred aimlessly with Mrs. Martha Taft for forty-five minutes about women's hats, the woman's place in politics, and nothing at all while they waited for Senator Taft to appear. He never did. "I can't tell you how much I wish Bob Taft were here," sighed Mary Margaret, when, ten minutes before the broadcast ended, the feminine conversation ground to an almost complete halt.

The intimacy of television is going to be a problem both to candidates and to the reporters. We got spectacular closeups of the faces of delegates who choose our Presidents, many of them frightening, others—to be honest—reassuring. A glimpse of Speaker Martin with his shy, predatory smile, saying: "Of course, no one could refuse a summons like that." Governor Dewey, radiating confidence, his smile firmly pinned on, side-stepping questions put by Joe Thorndike, managing editor of "Life" (even one as to what he planned to do with that front porch on the White House). Young boy delegates gazing brightly into the eyes of young girl delegates with dawning and wholly unpolitical interest. Senator Vandenberg, scratching his cheek and trying valiantly to summon up some interest in Governor Green's keynote address.

Altogether, television brings you the babble, the heat, the crowds, the chaos, the confusion without—at least on that first day—bringing you much information. But it's a wonderful show and its shortcomings are the fault of national conventions, not of the broadcasters.

"Life" magazine and N. B. C., which have teamed up for the event—and "Life" seems to get top billing in this arrangement—easily ran off with the honors, both in programs and in a technical sense. The "Life"-N. B. C. team seemed beautifully organized, knew where—with some exceptions—it was going from minute to minute, and succeeded in luring an impressive number of the more important people in front of its cameras. Its kinescope films — that is movies that were taken directly off a television receiver—were remarkably clear and well edited. These edited films of the daytime activities were shown to the nighttime audience so skillfully that one might easily get the impression he was seeing the actual daytime convention.

One of the most pertinent remarks of the day, incidentally, was made by Governor Alf Landon of Kansas. Landon said that convention speeches were once two or three hours long. Radio, he said, succeeded in cutting the oratory down by about two-thirds. Television, he continued, may cut it a third again. After listening and looking at Governor Dwight Green of Illinois for a long, dull hour, I find myself for the first time in my life in complete agreement with Governor Landon.

I may be one of the few surviving humans who saw the 1940 Republican convention televised on the old 441-line television sets. As I recall, there were great stretches of that broadcast during which we were presented with the spectacle of an empty table flanked by two empty chairs. In this one, they succeeded in putting people in the chairs and by 1952, the people in the chairs may conceivably have something of interest to say.

Sakhalin Coal Mining Becoming Mechanized

MOSCOW, (AP)—Tass says coal mining on Sakhalin Island in the Soviet Far East is being rapidly mechanized. According to the Soviet news agency, mechanization and better labor organization during this year permitted a rise in the output. Sakhalin's mines are a valuable source of coal for the Soviet island itself and for the Far East as a whole since the coal produced there is of high quality.

BANGKOK, Siam (AP)—Narcotics agents discovered a new trick of dope smugglers here. A passenger disembarked from a vessel from China carrying a cage full of ducks. An alert inspector noticed one duck wasn't quacking or moving about. It turned out to be stuffed—with opium.

SALLY'S SALLIES

"Don't look that way, Adam dear! Haven't you ever seen a sunsuit?"

RADIO IN REVIEW

By JOHN CROSBY

Television At The Convention

Just before midnight after the first long day of the Republican National Convention, Edward R. Murrow, looking wilted, bored and exhausted, slouched in front of a C. B. S. television camera, chatting fitfully with two of his C. B. S. news colleagues. "It must be the heat," remarked. "Here are three reporters. We've been here ten minutes and all we've said is that nothing much happened today or, if it did, we don't know about it." That pretty well sums up the first day of television's greatest event.

John Crosby

The convention was broadcast over eighteen East Coast stations virtually all day long; nothing much happened before the cameras; and, in spite of it television put on a great show. All day long notables and others who have small claim to that word paraded before the cameras, nobody saying very much but always bringing the expectation that they might; there was an intolerable amount of hand-shaking between radio reporters and delegates. ("Well, glad to have talked to you, Senator. Drop around again."); and many times interviews were conducted with a spirited opening and closing of mouths and no sound came.

We were given glimpses of girls wearing four-leaf clover ties bearing Taft's initials, of Stassen neckties, or rubber elephants and live elephants. We observed the dress of Virginia Davis, daughter of band leader Meyer Davis, which carried portraits of the four leading candidates, and watched with interest as she lifted her skirts to show her real choice, a portrait of Stassen, emblazoned well up on her thigh. Charles Collingwood, C. B. S. reporter, crashed the Union League Club with microphone and camera and went through the receiving line to the dismay and anger of Senator Edward Martin, of Pennsylvania. Another C. B. S. man parked five Hawaiian ladies in front of the cameras, singing for dear life for ten minutes, while he scurried about trying desperately to get somebody — anybody — to interview. Another reporter interviewed an Indian in his native costume and native language.

Mary Margaret McBride sparred aimlessly with Mrs. Martha Taft for forty-five minutes about women's hats, the woman's place in politics, and nothing at all while they waited for Senator Taft to appear. He never did. "I can't tell you how much I wish Bob Taft were here," sighed Mary Margaret, when, ten minutes before the broadcast ended, the feminine conversation ground to an almost complete halt.

The intimacy of television is going to be a problem both to candidates and to the reporters. We got spectacular closeups of the faces of delegates who choose our Presidents, many of them frightening, others—to be honest—reassuring. A glimpse of Speaker Martin with his shy, predatory smile, saying: "Of course, no one could refuse a summons like that." Governor Dewey, radiating confidence, his smile firmly pinned on, sidestepping questions put by Joe Thorndike, managing editor of "Life" (even one as to what he planned to do with that front porch on the White House). Young boy delegates gazing brightly into the eyes of young girl delegates with dawning and wholly unpolitical interest. Senator Vandenberg, scratching his cheek and trying valiantly to summon up some interest in Governor Green's keynote address.

Altogether, television brings you the babble, the heat, the crowds, the chaos, the confusion without—at least on that first day—bringing you much information. But it's a wonderful show and its shortcomings are the fault of national conventions, not of the broadcasters.

"Life" magazine and N. B. C., which have teamed up for the event—and "Life" seems to get top billing in this arrangement—easily ran off with the honors, both in programs and in a technical sense. The "Life"-N. B. C. team seemed beautifully organized, knew where—with some exceptions—it was going from minute to minute, and succeeded in luring an impressive number of the more important people in front of its cameras. Its kinescope films — that is movies that were taken directly off a television receiver—were remarkably clear and well edited. These edited films of the daytime activities were shown to the nighttime audience so skillfully that one might easily get the impression he was seeing the actual daytime convention.

One of the most pertinent remarks of the day, incidentally, was made by Governor Alf Landon of Kansas. Landon said that convention speeches were once two or three hours long. Radio, he said, succeeded in cutting the oratory down by about two-thirds. Television, he continued, may cut it a third again. After listening and looking at Governor Dwight Green of Illinois for a long, dull hour, I find myself for the first time in my life in complete agreement with Governor Landon.

I may be one of the few surviving humans who saw the 1940 Republican convention televised on the old 441-line television sets. As I recall, there were great stretches of that broadcast during which we were presented with the spectacle of an empty table flanked by two empty chairs. In this one, they succeeded in putting people in the chairs and by 1952, the people in the chairs may conceivably have something of interest to say.

Sakhalin Coal Mining Becoming Mechanized

MOSCOW, (AP)—Tass says coal mining on Sakhalin Island in the Soviet Far East is being rapidly mechanized. According to the Soviet news agency, mechanization and better labor organization during this year permitted a rise in the output. Sakhalin's mines are a valuable source of coal for the Soviet island itself and for the Far East as a whole since the coal produced there is of high quality.

Yesterday's Answer

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X E is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

CRYPTOQUOTE—A cryptogram quotation

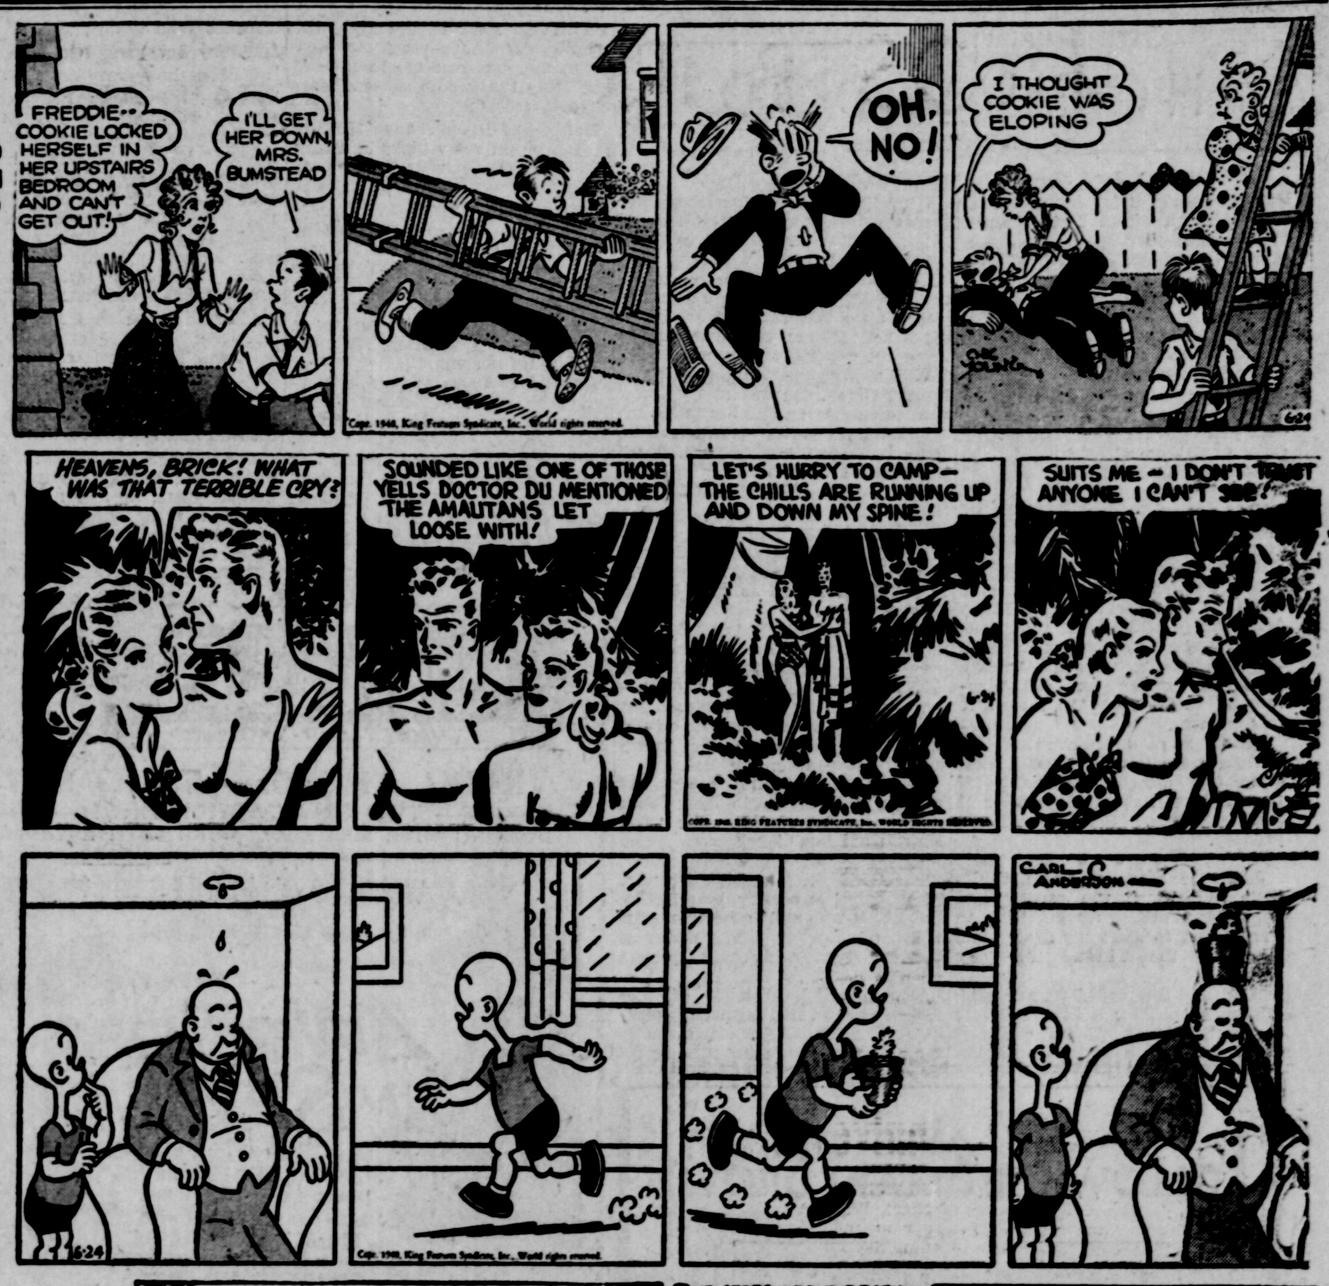

D N V P C N D B R D Q L H C W S T W G C W

J D Y W S, N V T L C N A. R D Q L P G D Y N V Y

J N D Y C N D B T D H C J D G H N V Z — R W S T D S.

KEEPING UP WITH HOLLYWOOD

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, June 23—(INS)—Howard Hawks today inked a deal with 20th to direct four pictures over a three-year period. First up, "I Was a Male War Bride" is adapted from the Reader's Digest comedy article by Henri Rochard. This is a completely zany yarn that just cries for Cary Grant or a reasonable facsimile.

Phil Baker

Cary is definitely the boy they want. Whether they get him is another story.

It is about a beautiful American Army nurse with a rank of lieutenant who marries a Belgian soldier and the nonsense centers about the soldier and his "lieutenant" bride trying to return to this country.

Hawks takes off next month for background shots in France, Belgium and occupied Germany for the picture has a September 1 starting date. Sol Siegel will produce.

Just one more of those "quiet little dinners at the ranch" and Alan Ladd will never get back to Paramount to start his next, "One Woman," the Tiffany Thayer thriller.

Alan and Sue called up and said, "Come on out for a little sun and an early dinner. There will just be Betty Hutton and Ted Briskin and the MacDonald Careys."

What happened is: Somebody ran over the dog. The dog bit Alan's hand. He was rushed to the Ventura Hospital, along with the dog who underwent four transfusions at the "vets." On the way home he picked up a flat tire and a speeding ticket. Dinner was served anything but quietly at 11 p. m.

P. S.: We never did see MacDonald Carey. He was at the hospital having seven stitches taken in his forehead after cracking his skull half-open against a wooden beam before we arrived.

But, anyway—love that Alan and Sue.

Phil Baker may O.K. his old vaudeville skit, "Man in the Box," to MGM for a Van Johnson-Frank Sinatra movie.

Sid Silvers and Fred Finklehoffe have written an original around the bare idea of a man in a box heckling a vaudeville performer (as Silvers used to heckle Baker) but they have given it a who-dun-it twist that holds up for movie mystery-plus-music material.

Only hitch is, will the boys get enough out of it to kick back $25,000 to Baker who owns "The Man in the Box" idea?

The "skid row" location for "Act Of Violence' is costing Van Heflin, Robert Ryan and others of the MGM company as many dimes as they can spare—and some they can't—brother!

The derelict district of Los Angeles hasn't had such easy pickings in years. Actors, notoriously easy touches, are doling it out right and left to some of the night-life "characters" who never got a dime for acting, but can emote a hard luck story that would squeeze tears out of a crocodile.

Heflin and Ryan change $50 into 50-cent pieces every night and they still can't scratch half the sob stories.

Florence Pritchett, Fifth Avenue's glamorous bachelor girl, is in town just for a vacation, she says, no love, no nothing.

Charlie Feldman and Jack Warner take off for Europe Friday adding to the evacuation of Hollywood by two.

We have been puzzled around this office for months about fan mail coming in from foreign countries singing the praises about a starlet who has appeared in only a picture or two. Now we know. A letter from England begins, "I have been asked by her press agent to write you about how crazy we are about Miss——." Publicity hounds, like murder, will out.

Come July 3, Andy Hervey's son, Jimmy, marries Margie Dowdell. Seems just a few years ago, Jimmy was tagging his old man around asking him how to become a Hollywood press agent. Well, he knows now. Jimmy is in the MGM publicity department trying to top Andy's items from Paramount.

After 15 years as George Raft's right-hand man, Mack Gray is on his own. They are still the best of friends, but Mack wants to concentrate on an acting career. And why not? He is a good comedian both on and off the screen.

The George Sidneys are off to Switzerland on their first real vacation in years. And if they weren't taking a plane they could almost waft over there on the wings of preview raves on "Three Musketeers," his latest directorial hit for MGM.

Lynn Merrick (the ex-Mrs. Conrad Nagel) is the newest number in Otto Preminger's telephone book. They were dining at The Dells.

Three special delivery letters in one day to Isabelita from Rory Calhoun in New York.

"Oh, look . . . HONEY!"

Rail Stocks Advance Up To Two Points To Reach Highs For Year

NEW YORK, June 23 (AP)—Railroad issues had a green light in front of them in the stock market today and many streaked ahead to the highest prices for the year or longer.

Gains ranged from fractions to more than two points in the sharpest overall advance in two weeks. Advances of a point or so were numerous throughout.

Volume picked up to 1,760,000 shares from 1,410,000 Tuesday. This has been a familiar pattern in recent trading, with business expanding in a rising market and contracting when prices declined.

Nickel Plate was again well out in front of the rails, tacking on a two-point gain at 73 on top of yesterday's five-point advance to a new high.

Others selling at new 1948 peaks included Missouri - Kansas - Texas 7½, Lackawanna 12, St. Louis-San Francisco 15, Kansas City Southern 43¾, Erie 15¾, Seaboard Air Lines Railroad 25½, Southern Railway 49¼, Northern Pacific 27 and St. Paul 12⅛.

American Telephone was one of the handful of losers, along with International Telephone and Sinclair Oil.

A strong demand for rails paced a generally steady but quiet bond market.

The persistent softness in United States governments in the past few days remained unbroken. Treasury 2½s of September, 1967-72 lost 17/32 at 101.22 and declines of 1/32 to 6/32 were common in the entire list. Government dealers had no special reason to assign to the declines and said there was not a lot of activity going on.

Sales of $4,852,000 compared with $4,130,000 on Tuesday.

Rail Stocks Advance Up To Two Points To Reach Highs For Year

NEW YORK, June 23 (AP)—Railroad issues had a green light in front of them in the stock market today and many streaked ahead to the highest prices for the year or longer.

Gains ranged from fractions to more than two points in the sharpest overall advance in two weeks. Advances of a point or so were numerous throughout.

Volume picked up to 1,760,000 shares from 1,410,000 Tuesday. This has been a familiar pattern in recent trading, with business expanding in a rising market and contracting when prices declined.

Of the 1,051 issues which appeared on the ticker tape, 626 advanced and 231 declined.

Nickel Plate was again well out in front of the rails, tacking on a two-point gain at 73 on top of yesterday's five-point advance to a new high.

Others selling at new 1948 peaks included Missouri - Kansas - Texas 7½, Lackawanna 12, St. Louis-San Francisco 15, Kansas City Southern 43¾, Erie 15¾, Seaboard Air Lines Railroad 25½, Southern Railway 49¼, Northern Pacific 27 and St. Paul 12⅛.

American Telephone was one of the handful of losers, along with International Telephone and Sinclair Oil.

A strong demand for rails paced a generally steady but quiet bond market.

The persistent softness in United States governments in the past few days remained unbroken. Treasury 2½s of September, 1967-72 lost 17/32 at 101.22 and declines of 1/32 to 6/32 were common in the entire list. Government dealers had no special reason to assign to the declines and said there was not a lot of activity going on.

Sales of $4,852,000 compared with $4,130,000 on Tuesday.

Several Sources Plan Probe Of Drug Hoard

State, Welfare Inquiries Set

Investigations from several sources are expected in the case of the late Mrs. Jennie Virginia Peyton, 59-year-old public relief client and state medical care patient, whose Lexington Avenue home revealed a hoard of cash, state-supplied drugs and medicines, large quantities of food, clothing, canned goods and other supplies, gathered over a long period of time.

J. Milton Patterson, head of the State Department of Public Welfare, expressed amazement last night that "anyone under the state medical care program would be able to accumulate a vast store of drugs, without someone discovering the fact she was obtaining more than she could use."

Patterson declared the case had not been called to his personal attention. He said it will probably come before the next meeting of the state medical council, of which he is a member, and indicated the case will be checked thoroughly.

State Probe Planned

A spokesman for Governor William Preston Lane, Jr., also stated yesterday that an investigation will be launched immediately into the case.

Mrs. Peyton, who was a private and public relief recipient for approximately 15 years or more, was found dead at her home, 1105 Lexington Avenue, May 17 by Mrs. Delia Van Meter, who occupies the same house.

County authorities were notified and Dr. H. V. Deming, deputy county medical examiner, who signed her death certificate, notified the county sheriff.

Sheriff Edward R. Muir and his deputies found what they described as enough clothes, dry goods and foodstuffs to start a store and enough drugs to supply a score of people, along with a hoard of $514 in cash hidden under rugs, table cloths, in old pocketbooks, boxes, the fingers of gloves and various other places. Relatives appeared and claimed the money, food, clothing and few scant items of household furniture and the drugs were removed by the sheriff.

Subsequent investigation by The Cumberland News revealed the drugs had been obtained by Mrs. Peyton on prescription from three local physicians and supplied at a local drug store, all of which had been furnished under the state Medical Care program, a separate department from the Welfare Board.

The Welfare Board, according to Mrs. Elinor Westerfeld, executive secretary, had certified the woman for medical care, which is administered through the state and county health departments.

Enrolled In 1945

A check of records at the Health Department office revealed that Mrs. Peyton was enrolled in the medical care program November 1, 1945, when the program went into effect in Allegany County.

Since that time, according to the records, the number of prescriptions in her name averaged approximately between seven to 10 monthly with two or three each month for insulin, the costliest of the items.

The number of prescriptions tapered off earlier this year, with 10 issued in January, seven in February, four in March and one in April, the records showed.

Dr. Winter R. Frantz, city and county health officer, said that Mrs. Peyton came under the "indigent" classification in the medical care program, which is administered by the Health Department.

All persons receiving aid from the Welfare Board are classed as indigent and are eligible to receive medical care certificates from the Health Department, he said.

Persons holding such certificates may consult the physician of their choice, Dr. Frantz said. Doctors' and druggists' bills are sent to the Health Department, which in turn submits them to the State Department of Health for payment.

Persons holding such certificates may consult the physician of their choice, Dr. Frantz said.

This procedure employed by the welfare department gives the recipient of such a certificate freedom to visit various physicians and one can prescribe without knowledge that a previous prescription has been provided by another doctor.

The Weather

They say around City Hall that if you want it to rain, just bring a carnival to town, and from present indications they are right, because it sure did pour down again yesterday, when .32 inches was reported. The high temperature yesterday was 82 degrees, but had slipped down to 73 at 11 o'clock last night. For today—and hold your hats please—scattered showers or thundershowers are forecast, which means a possible second postponement of the heavyweight fight and local athletic events. Wonder when that carnival is going to move out?

Sale Agreement Is Reached For Super Market

Albert Tomsko To Purchase Business

An agreement of sale was reached yesterday between Albert T. Tomsko and W. T. Coulehan and Brother, Inc., trading as the Community Super Market, Wineow Street, regarding purchase by Tomsko of the business.

Tomsko said last night that the present operation will continue until July 3, after which he will take over the business.

Miss Margaret Coulehan, president of the firm, said the sale will not be consummated until sometime during the first week in July.

Tomsko plans to begin an inventory July 4, and the results will affect the final purchase price. The inventory will probably take four or five days.

Tomsko said the market will be closed after July 3 for several weeks, since contractors will start making extensive improvements to the interior as soon as the inventory is completed. The name, he said, will be changed although he is not now prepared to announce the new name.

He said he is purchasing the stock and fixtures and leasing the building from the Coulehan firm, which erected the structure about 1921 or 1922. An agreement has been reached for a five-year lease with an option for a five-year renewal, he added.

The Coulehan firm, which is over half a century old, was incorporated in 1923. After the present building was erected, a wholesale business dealing in drugs, coal, feed and groceries was conducted there until December 18, 1937.

On that date the present super market, the first of its kind in Cumberland, was opened with Tomsko as manager. He continued in that capacity until February of this year. The present manager, Leonard Schneider, LaVale, will continue until the Coulehan firm winds up its operation July 3, Miss Coulehan said.

Tomsko said he plans to operate an entirely new kind of food business which will cut shopping time from 50 to 70 per cent. He withdrew further details pending the ordering of new equipment.

Miss Coulehan said the Coulehan firm does not plan any other operation at present. She added that she does not know whether or not the firm will be dissolved.

INTRODUCING FRISKY-- Rev. C. H. Wakeman and his squirrel, Frisky, are well known to the clerks in many local stores, for the animal that received its first nourishment from a medicine dropper has accompanied her master on many a shopping tour and usually startles some clerk by sneaking from Rev. Wakeman's pocket on to his shoulder just as a purchase is being made.

Frisky, The Squirrel, Snubs Nuts For Menu Of Chocolate Ice Cream

Makes Home With Rev. C. H. Wakeman

Frisky, the squirrel who began life with a medicine dropper in her mouth, now at the age of two would pass up a whole orchard of nuts for one spoonful of ice cream —especially if it's chocolate ice cream.

Apple and peach pie also get preference over nuts when Frisky is selecting her menu, according to Rev. C. H. Wakeman, 121 West First Street, who owns the squirrel and thinks she is one of the best trained animals in Maryland.

Mrs. Wakeman gets peeved at times when a new lace curtain fails to support Frisky in one of her leaps from window to window, but she also has deep feeling for the little animal that prefers a nest in the sun parlor to a home in the trees.

Frisky's mother was killed before she had time to tell her little squirrel about the facts of wildlife so Rev. Wakeman took over the duties of feeding and training the small animal he discovered in the nearby woodlands.

Known To Clerks

Now after two years of "civilized living," she is well known to the clerks in many local stores where Rev. Wakeman does his shopping. For, according to him, Frisky has frequently crawled from his pocket and perched on his shoulder just as he is about to make a purchase from one of the main stem clerks.

Strangers in the Wakemen home are likely to have trouble getting Frisky to be sociable, but once her master starts giving commands the squirrel will go through the paces of entertaining like an old actor who loves to have the eye of the public upon him.

In private life Rev. Wakemen's pet sometimes gets into trouble, especially if she sneaks off with a few neckties, a sock or a dish rag to soften up the nest where she spends the nights.

When the temperature gets low, though, Rev. Wakemen said there isn't much he can do about Frisky sleeping with him because she usually slips in after he has gone to sleep.

The little ball of brown fur learned long ago to stay indoors away from speeding automobiles and less considerate boys with air rifles, and in turn the Wakeman's bar dogs and cats from their home.

Makes Thorough Check

Frisky clings to the native instinct and takes a high seat even when she hears a dog bark or a cat meow. "Why," said Rev. Wakeman, "even if we leave a piece of newspaper on the floor or change a piece of furniture in the house the squirrel makes a timid but thorough investigation before relaxing.

Besides that ice cream and pie taste, Frisky likes her candy. Once in a while she hides a piece for a midnight snack, "and, boy does she get sore if any one touches it or takes it from the hiding place," Rev. Wakeman said.

"About the nuts," Rev. Wakeman said, "Frisky can cut a good portion of hickories down during a meal and if she decides to save a few there is a possibility that the rugs may show a few bulges where she has stored the excess.

"Some people say a squirrel doesn't remember where things are hidden," Rev. Wakeman declared, "but don't you believe it. Just let Mrs. Wakeman or myself remove one of those nuts and we have the sulkiest squirrel on our hands that can be found."

And a sulking squirrel can think up a lot of mean things to do, especially if one forgets to put his necktie in the drawer or his socks in the cupboard.

Mrs. Simone Eckard And Her Son, 3, Return From Trip To England, France

A French-born war bride and her three-year-old son returned to their home in Cumberland Tuesday night after spending three months in England and France.

Mrs. Simone Troughton Eckard, wife of Oliver B. Eckard, 256 East Elder Street, and their son, Bruce, arrived at New York Tuesday morning aboard the Queen Mary after a five-day voyage across the Atlantic.

Mrs. Eckard visited her parents, who reside in Southampton, England, and also journeyed to her birthplace in Niles, France. She and her son left here March 12 for their trip overseas.

Eckard, who is employed by the Cumberland Electric Company, met his future wife in England while he was serving with the Army Air Force during World War II.

This makes the third Atlantic crossing for their son, who was born in England.

Although he has done more traveling in his three years than many older persons, Bruce still isn't sure who went away and who stayed home.

When he walked in with his mother Tuesday night, he greeted other members of the family with, "Hey, where have you folks been?"

CONGRATULATIONS-- Best wishes for success in his new position as general manager of the Baltimore and Ohio Chicago terminal region office were extended H. F. Wyatt (left), by C. W. Van Horn (right) vice president of the company, at a testimonial dinner given in Wyatt's honor at Ali Ghan Country Club last night. R. A. J. Morrison, new superintendent, is looking on. Wyatt served as Cumberland Division Superintendent for six years.

Baltimore And Ohio Workers Honor Former Superintendent At Banquet

Approximately 200 Baltimore and Ohio employes were on hand last night at Ali Ghan Country Club to honor H. F. Wyatt, former superintendent of the Cumberland Division, who left early this month to become general manager of the railroad's Chicago terminal region office.

Principal speaker for the elaborate program was C. W. Van Horn, vice president of the B. and O., who remarked that Cumberland provided the company with a lot of its executives, and that this division either made or broke them during the training periods.

Other speakers included A. K. Galloway, general superintendent of motive power; C. V. Harveson, chief engineer of maintenance; F. C. Hoskins, general manager; D. C. Turnbull, Jr., executive assistant; J. L. Rogers, members of the I.C.C.; R.A.J. Morrison, new superintendent, and R P. Bartlett, division trainmaster.

Melvin R. McChessney, a representative of the Oakite Company, sang two selections during the program.

A Shrine ring, studded with an emblem of diamonds, was presented to Wyatt by R. P. Bartlett as the climax of the program. Wyatt, in receiving the gift, thanked the Cumberland employes for their cooperation while he was here and graciously accepted the gift from his former fellow employes.

The committee making arrangements for the affair was headed by C. A. McGinn, chief clerk to the superintendent, assisted by Bartlett, E. J. Klopton, division engineer; A. E. Beckman, division master mechanic; C. R. Wheeler, division storekeeper, and E. G. Shirley, assistant trainmaster.

Following the banquet a social hour was held.

Bakery Workers Win Union Shop Election Here

Union Says Contract Talks "Stalemated"

Local 246, Bakery and Confectionary Workers International Union of American, AFL, won a union security election held Tuesday in four area baking company plants, Charles W. Robinette, president, reported yesterday.

The election was held by the National Labor Relations Board at the plants of the Community, Schmidt and Ort Baking Companies here and McIntyre Bakery in Westernport.

He said 154 inside plant workers were eligible to vote and added that results are subject to NLRB certification.

Robinette said the union is asking the United States Conciliation Service to aid in contract negotiations which, he said, are stalemated.

The present agreement expired May 1, he said, but is a continuing contract and is in force while contract negotiations are in progress.

The union said contract talks are expected to be resumed in the near future.

Local 246 has had a union shop clause in its contract and the successful election held here this week will give it the legal right to incorporate union security clauses in its new agreement.

Textile Workers Meet Today For Contract Report

Holden Confers With Company And Union

A full report of contract negotiations with the Celanese Corporation of America was presented last night at an overflow meeting of members of Local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America, CIO, and similar reports will be given at the second meeting called this morning at 10:30 oclock at the union hall.

Playford Aldridge, president of the union, declined to comment last night on the report or action of the membership since the meetings were not completed.

A conference of the company and union tentatively scheduled yesterday afternoon was called off, a company spokesman said.

The only significant development yesterday was the appearance of James A. Holden, Washington, who has represented the United States Conciliation Service in most of the major labor disputes in this city for the past five years.

Holden was reported to have conferred with company and union officials yesterday. He was assigned to the case some time ago when the union filed notice with the government that a dispute existed at the local plant employing some 8,500 hourly rated employes.

An informed source said there has been no time set for the next meeting between the company and the union. The present contract expires Saturday.

At a meeting Monday, the union was reported holding fast to its demand for a 25 cents an hour wage increase which a company official termed "not an acceptable demand."

At membership meetings held last week, union negotiators reported "considerable" progress on contractual matters in the agreement.

No wage pattern has been established in the rayon field by any major producer, although New Bedford Rayon and the union agreed to a 10-cent an hour increase some months ago. This contract runs until July 30, 1949, and provides for a wage reopening at any time after July 30, 1948.

Local 26, Rubber Workers Union, and the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company met again yesterday to discuss changes in the union contract. It is understood progress in contractual issues has been satisfactory and that the wage question is due to be raised in earnest within a few days. Negotiations will resume today at 10 a. m.

Legion Auxiliary "Girls' State" Delegates Converge On Annapolis

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 23 (AP)—Teen-age girls commandeered the State House today.

Fifty of them were here from all over Maryland for the third "Girls' State," sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary, and they arrived with politics in mind.

One slender, brown-haired Baltimore lass was campaigning for "Governor" when she stepped off the bus.

The girls will remain here until Saturday. In the meantime they will stage a citizenship affair something like the annual YMCA Boys' Legislature.

Governor Lane will address them, as will State Senator Louis J. Goldstein, Calvert County, Mrs. Millard Tydings, and Legion officials.

Mrs. T. Frank Lynch, Baltimore, Department President of the Auxiliary, said the feminine delegates will elect a governor, learn how state government functions — and enjoy a little social life in the evening.

Nominations will be made tomorrow by two parties, the Federalist and Internationalist.

Most of the girls were selected by their high school principals and sponsored by individual auxiliary units.

State Commander Harry S. Allen, Laurel, addressed them this evening

Governor Lane will speak tomorrow morning, as will Senator Goldstein. After the nominations, Mrs. Tydings, wife of the U. S. Senator, will address the delegates. They'll visit Government House for tea in late afternoon, and in the evening stage a "Talent Night" and dance.

Mrs. David Emmert, Hagerstown, is director of "Girls' State," and like Mrs. Lynch, she represents Morris Frock Unit No. 42, Hagerstown.

Mayor Urges Holiday Accident Prevention

In view of the approaching Fourth of July holiday weekend, Mayor Thomas S. Post yesterday urged Cumberland residents to co-operate with the National Safety Council campaign to hold down the holiday accident toll.

"I earnestly ask every citizen of our community to join in this safety endeavor by accepting personal responsibility for avoiding accidents," the mayor said.
